Senate Files Ouster Suit Against G. O. Smith

SMITH IS CHAIRMAN OF THE FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION

WAS APPOINTED TO CHAIRMANSHIP BY PRESIDENT HOOVER

SENATE CONTENTS UNDER ITS RULES SMITH WAS NEVER LEGALLY CONFIRMED

By HERBERT LITTLE (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, May 4.—The senate's ouster suit against President Hoover's chairman of the federal power commission, George Otis Smith of Maine, was filed in the District of Columbia supreme court today.

The senate's contention that under its rules Smith was never legally confirmed was set forth in a petition filed by John W. Davis, eminent constitutional lawyer, and former Governor Alexander J. Groesbeck of Michigan, appearing as special counsel for the senate.

Smith, represented by former Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania, assisted by Attorney General Mitchell, will file a reply setting forth the opposing contention, which President Hoover, in opposing the senate's right to reject Smith, termed an attempt "to encroach upon the executive functions by removal of a duly appointed executive officer under the guise of reconsideration of his nomination."

Thus began a notable battle of the constitution law, with the senate and the White House tugging to bend, each in their own direction, the delicate checks and balances of the constitution established more than 140 years ago.

It is practically certain to go to the supreme court for a final ruling—and it may not finally be decided upon until the end of Smith's term, which expires in 1935.

BRYAN UNTIEDT IS RETURNING HOME

FAMILY REFUSE LUCRATIVE MOVIE AND VAUDEVILLE CONTRACTS

Kansas City, Mo., May 4.—(U.P.)—Companionship of other youngsters was Bryan Untiedt's today as he stopped here on his way home from a visit with President Hoover.

Under the never-relaxed vigilance of secret service agents, the hero of the Colorado school bus disaster was visiting in the home of L. E. Holland, executive manager of the Chamber of Commerce.

He was guest for a day of Garrett Holland, 17, and his sister, Helen Adella. Bryan expected to leave tonight for his home near Towner, Colo.

His advent in Kansas City was unostentatious. Few persons in the union station recognized the slim youth in the shadow of William H. Davenport, head of the secret service department here, as the White House visitor of last week.

Holland and his son, along with Mrs. Davenport and three of the Davenport children, May, 14, Margaret, 11, and Beulah Ruth, 9, met Bryan in the station, and all were whisked away to the Holland home.

Young Untiedt carried a canvas and leather case which, it was learned, contained a gift from Allen Hoover—a rifle. His main sport between farm chores has been hunting coyote and pheasant.

Lamar, Colo., May 4.—(U.P.)—This section of Colorado prepared today to celebrate the return of its "favorite son," Bryan Untiedt, who will return home tomorrow from his visit with President Hoover at the White House.

Bryan has been offered a trip around the world by a New York moving picture company. He has been offered vaudeville contracts at $1,000 a week, and he had a half dozen other offers of financial gain through exploitation of his name.

But there will be none of that, say his parents, who have decided flatly against all such offers.

"We do not want him to live on the honor of the nation," said his mother, Mrs. H. A. Untiedt, who lost another son in the bus tragedy.

"We want him to be a real man through his own efforts and thus be entirely worthy of the honor President Hoover has bestowed upon him."

NEW MOVEMENT ON TO SUPPORT PROHIBITION

MILITANT IN EVERY ASPECT, EVEN TO ITS NAME, "ALLIED FORCES"

DEDICATED TO A FINISH FIGHT FOR "LIBERTY UNDER LAW"

New York, May 4.—(U.P.)—A new movement in support of prohibition, militant in its every aspect even to its name, "The Allied Forces" was launched today by prominent drys throughout the country and dedicated to a finish fight for "liberty under law."

The general campaign program, which will embrace a coast to coast series of conferences, three-day educational and inspirational mass meetings in 250 cities and a comprehensive nationwide advertising and publicity campaign by business men and political figures, was announced by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, dry leader and an organizer of the forces.

The muster of sponsors is a veritable blue book of dry protagonists, including Thomas A. Edison, Senator William E. Borah and Senator Morris Sheppard; Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania; Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Mary E. Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College, Frank E. Gannett of Rochester.

Defining the campaign's spirit, Dr. Poling said the leaders of the Allied Forces do not believe that "all of God's children" are on one side of the issue. They know too that there are other issues. They recognize an honest, deep-seated difference of opinion. But they do not believe prohibition is a national issue and must be treated accordingly. They are unequivocally for the eighteenth amendment.

"They believe the great majority of the American people are with them. It is their purpose to assist in giving this majority reasons for its faith and a fully organized medium of expression, locally and nationally.

Dr. Poling asked if there was any particular political significance to the movement, pointed out that the organization is non-partisan and its sponsors drawn from all political classifications.

It was pointed out that while the majority of the campaigners in the Allied Forces are members of existing temperance and prohibition organizations, the movement has no relationship to any other group. Wherever practicable, it is set forth, the campaigns will function through existing dry groups.

The Allied Forces array themselves for battle in three regiments, Allied Youth, headed by 986 young people as state and local vice presidents; Allied Campaigners, a flying squadron which will conduct the field work of conferences and meetings and Allied Business Men who will conduct the advertising and publicity attack.

The Allied Campaigners will conduct more than 1,500 mass meetings from September, 1931, to June, 1932, which it is estimated 2,000,000 persons will attend.

The Allied Business Men and the reorganized American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation is headed by R. H. Scott, president of the Reo Motor Car Company. Nation-wide advertising and publicity will be the ammunition of this group.

'Taxation Wrung From People to Support War Armament Checks Economic Progress'—Hoover

PRESIDENT SPEAKS TO INTERNATIONAL CHAMBER COMMERCE

DELIVERS MOST VIGOROUS MESSAGE TO NATIONS OF THE WORLD

WORLD BUSINESS MEN SHOULD FORCE STATESMEN TO DISARM

By PAUL R. MALLON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, May 4.—President Hoover today called upon world business men to force statesmen to disarm.

The greatest hindrance to economic progress, he told the International Chamber of Commerce in a speech, is taxation wrung from the people so that governments may spend five billion dollars a year supporting their armies.

Pointing his remarks to the general disarmament conference to be held next February, the executive delivered what may be regarded as his most vigorous international message since entering the White House. He said:

"It is within the power of business men of the world to insist that this problem shall be met with sincerity, courage and constructive action. It is within the power of statesmen to give the world a great assurance for the future and a great moral victory for humanity."

His welcoming speech to the business leaders of many nations was short, but it sounded a new note in discussions about the troubles of the world. The minds of his hearers were filled with proposals for solution of the silver dispute, the concentration of gold bullion and tariff barriers—but the president mentioned none of these.

His speech subordinated them and raised what he called the paramount question, disarmament.

The world war started the thing in the first place, Mr. Hoover maintained. It brought "destruction of life and property, the great tax burdens, and social and political instability."

Though the nations have signed the Kellogg-Briand pact promising not to resort to arms, they have, he added, nearly 5,500,000 men actively under arms and 20,000,000 more in reserve. The figures are an increase of 70 per cent over the pre-war period. The annual cost he estimated at around five billion dollars.

"Surely with this understanding," he said referring to the pact, "the self-defense of nations could be assured with proportionately far less military forces than these."

"This vast armament continues not only a burden upon the economic recuperation of the world, but of even more consequence, the constant threats and fears which arise from it are a serious contribution to all forms of instability, whether social, political or economic."

"International confidence cannot be built upon fear—it must be built upon good will. The whole history of the world is filled with chapter after chapter of the failure to secure peace through either competitive arms or intimidation."

Turning directly to the coming arms conference he added: "The very calling of this conference is in itself not only proof of need, but is an emphatic evidence of the progress in the world demand for relief and for peace."

"Of all the proposals for the economic rehabilitation of the world, I know of none which compares in necessity or importance with the successful result of that conference."

BANDITS GAIN THREE DIAMOND RINGS FROM ST. PAUL MATRON

St. Paul, May 4.—(U.P.)—After firing three shots to frighten their victims, three bandits obtained three diamond rings valued at $2,000 from Mrs. Harry Bernstein last night.

As Mrs. Bernstein and her husband put their automobile in the garage of their Bechwood avenue home, the masked men fired into the air. After Mrs. Bernstein had handed the leader one of her rings, he said, "Come across with the rest; we know you've got 'em."

She handed over her other rings and the men attempted to drive off in the Bernsteins' car. After a few minutes in vainly attempting to start the automobile, they disappeared on foot.

FUNERAL RITES FOR PROF. WILLIS MASON

WAS MEMBER UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA FACULTY FOR 20 YEARS

Minneapolis, Minn., May 4.—(U.P.)—Funeral services will be held today for Prof. Willis Mason West, 73, member of the University of Minnesota history faculty for 20 years and author of several history text books.

Among the better known text books that he wrote were "The Story of American Democracy," "The American People," "The Ancient World," and "The Modern World."

It was the first of these that was banned by Mayor Thompson in 1927 when he staged his battle against the "insidious influences" of King George among American text book writers.

Prof. West was born in St. Cloud, Minn., in 1857. After graduating from the University of Minnesota, he was superintendent of schools at Duluth from 1881 to 1884 and at Faribault from 1884 to 1891. He was professor of history at the University of North Dakota for a year before coming to the University of Minnesota in 1893.

He retired from active teaching in 1912 to operate a dairy farm near Grand Rapids, Minn. In 1920 he was mentioned as non-partisan candidate for governor of Minnesota.

SIX UNMASKED MEN ROB MEMPHIS BANK OF $25,000 THIS MORNING

Memphis, Tenn., May 4.—(U.P.)—The Main and Beale street branch of the Union Planters National Bank and Trust Co. was robbed of approximately $25,000 shortly after the opening hour today by six unmasked bandits, three of whom entered the main lobby of the building while their companions guarded the doors and remained in a waiting automobile nearby.

The bandits completed their holdup before the police and fire squads, summoned to the neighborhood by alarm sirens, arrived.

LEGAL ATTACK MUST START IN THE LOWER COURTS

CONSIDERED IN STATE SUPREME COURT ONLY ON APPEAL

RULING IS MADE BY CHIEF JUSTICE SAMUEL B. WILSON

St. Paul, Minn., May 4.—(U.P.)—The test of Minnesota's reapportionment bill was thrown onto a new track today through a ruling that the legal attack on the plan must start in the lower courts and be considered in the state supreme court only on appeal.

The ruling was made by Chief Justice Samuel B. Wilson of the state supreme court. Wilson's decision was announced after a hearing on petitions filed by W. Yale Smiley, Minneapolis attorney.

The court ruling will be on whether Gov. Floyd B. Olson's veto of the redistricting bill passed by the 1931 legislature is valid. If the veto is found invalid, the bill will be thrown out and Olson may call a special session of the legislature to pass an acceptable bill.

Smiley's petition to Chief Justice Wilson requested the jurist to issue three orders, as follows:

1. Return of the filing for re-election of Harold Knutson of the sixth district.
2. Ordering Secretary of State Mike Holm to refuse acceptance of further filings.
3. Ordering Holm to publish no notices of congressional elections in 1932, and make no other preparations for the election.

Smiley asked that a ruling be made as soon as possible by the state supreme court, declaring there is need of haste and that much time will be lost if the matter is taken through the lower courts.

The attorney announced after Chief Justice Wilson had announced his ruling that he would file his petitions in Ramsey county district court.

A suit filed by Emil Holmes of Minneapolis requesting the Secretary of State to accept his filing for congressman at large is on file in Hennepin county district court. It probably will be changed to Ramsey county court.

3 YOUTHS DIE IN PLANE CRASH

AIRPLANE FAILS TO COME OUT OF SPIN AT ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Asheville, N. C., May 4.—(U.P.)—Three youths died Sunday in a crash near the Asheville-Hendersonville airport, when their airplane failed to come out of a spin and fell 1,000 feet.

The dead were Graham Gardner, 22, who was licensed as a pilot several days ago, Paul Yowell and Sam McMillan, all of Asheville. They were killed instantly when the single-motored biplane went into a spin and crashed while Gardner was attempting a "wing-over."

Waverly, Ia., May 4.—While the home built airplane which he had flown for three years without mishap stood idle in a field nearby, Paul Bopp, 24, fell to his death Sunday in a new ship which he was considering buying. Observers said he banked the plane too sharply and crashed from a height of 250 feet.

Monticello, Ill., May 4.—Andrew Tate, pilot, of Champaign, and Jesse Miller, Chicago, were seriously injured Sunday when their airplane crashed as Tate made a forced landing after his motor stalled at an altitude of almost 20,000 feet.

Dalles, Ore., May 4.—Verlin Darmelle, 22, an amateur parachute jumper, was fatally injured Sunday when he made a jump from a height of 2,000 feet. It was believed his chute ripped. He died four hours later.

Hard to Keep Steam Fitter, Welder in Jail: They Wreck the Place

Chicago, May 4.—(U.P.)—Chief of Police J. Z. Miller of Glenview village declared today he never again will trust a steam fitter and a welder together—not even in his "breakproof" jail.

Floyd Wright, welder, and Raymond Wright, steamfitter, were the names given by two men whom Miller arrested on burglary charges and placed in the jail which he boasted nobody could escape from.

Miller's faith in his lockup overcame his distrust of the steamfitter-welder combination and he left the brothers unguarded overnight.

He returned to find that Frank and Raymond literally had taken the jail apart. Cell doors were off their hinges, locks broken and twisted and the place in general disorder.

GAINED FORTUNE "ON HIS OWN," THEN LOST $150,000 TO KIDNAPERS

Chicago, May 4.—(U.P.)—Thrilling details of how a gambler with nerve defied the gangs for months while he amassed a small fortune "on his own," only to have it wiped out when kidnapers collected $150,000 in cash from his wife in exchange for his freedom, were discussed freely today by the victim, James Hackett of Blue Island.

Hackett was released Sunday after being held prisoner since Friday by men who surrounded him as he drove to a country club, threatened him with revolvers, shotguns and machine guns and forced him to accompany them.

It was not the first attempt gangsters had made to take away the money he made defying them by operating gambling places in the southern suburb. Both he and his son, George, had been threatened frequently. An attempt was made recently to kill him with a bomb.

Mrs. Hackett knew of the previous threats and was fearful her husband would be killed. Without even reporting the kidnapping to police she raised $95,000 in cash, borrowed $55,000 more from a bank, met the kidnapers in an isolated place, and gave them the money. Hackett said the transaction left him "broke."

Hackett said he was positive he could not identify any of his abductors. He expressed an opinion from remarks he heard that the gang was the same which had kidnapped at least 5 other wealthy men in recent months.

CONSIDERED IN STATE SUPREME SUPREME COURT ONLY ON APPEAL

RULING IS MADE BY CHIEF JUSTICE SAMUEL B. WILSON

St. Paul, Minn., May 4.—(U.P.)—The test of Minnesota's reapportionment bill was thrown onto a new track today through a ruling that the legal attack on the plan must start in the lower courts and be considered in the state supreme court only on appeal.

The ruling was made by Chief Justice Samuel B. Wilson of the state supreme court. Wilson's decision was announced after a hearing on petitions filed by W. Yale Smiley, Minneapolis attorney.

The court ruling will be on whether Gov. Floyd B. Olson's veto of the redistricting bill passed by the 1931 legislature is valid. If the veto is found invalid, the bill will be thrown out and Olson may call a special session of the legislature to pass an acceptable bill.

Smiley's petition to Chief Justice Wilson requested the jurist to issue three orders, as follows:

1. Return of the filing for re-election of Harold Knutson of the sixth district.

2. Ordering Secretary of State Mike Holm to refuse acceptance of further filings.

3. Ordering Holm to publish no notices of congressional elections in 1932, and make no other preparations for the election.

Smiley asked that a ruling be made as soon as possible by the state supreme court, declaring there is need of haste and that much time will be lost if the matter is taken through the lower courts.

The attorney announced after Chief Justice Wilson had announced his ruling that he would file his petitions in Ramsey county district court.

A suit filed by Emil Holmes of Minneapolis requesting the Secretary of State to accept his filing for congressman at large is on file in Hennepin county district court. It probably will be changed to Ramsey county court.

3 YOUTHS DIE IN PLANE CRASH

AIRPLANE FAILS TO COME OUT OF SPIN AT ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Asheville, N. C., May 4.—(U.P.)—Three youths died Sunday in a crash near the Asheville-Hendersonville airport, when their airplane failed to come out of a spin and fell 1,000 feet.

The dead were Graham Gardner, 22, who was licensed as a pilot several days ago, Paul Yowell and Sam McMillan, all of Asheville. They were killed instantly when the single-engine biplane went into a spin and crashed while Gardner was attempting a "wing-over."

Waverly, Ia., May 4.—While the home built airplane which he had flown for three years without mishap stood idle in a field nearby, Paul Bopp, 24, fell to his death Sunday in a new ship which he was considering buying. Observers said he banked the plane too sharply and crashed from a height of 250 feet.

Monticello, Ill., May 4.—Andrew Tate, pilot of Champagne, and Jesse Miller, Chicago, were seriously injured Sunday when their airplane crashed as Tate made a forced landing after his motor stalled at an altitude of almost 20,000 feet.

Dalles, Ore., May 4.—Verlin Darmelle, 22, an amateur parachute jumper, was fatally injured Sunday when he made a jump from a height of 2,000 feet. It was believed his chute ripped. He died four hours later.

Hard to Keep Steam Fitter, Welder in Jail: They Wreck the Place

Chicago, May 4.—(U.P.)—Chief of Police J. Z. Miller of Glenview village declared today he never again will trust a steam fitter and a welder together—not even in his "breakproof" jail.

Floyd Wright, welder, and Raymond Wright, steamfitter, were the names given by two men whom Miller arrested on burglary charges and placed in the jail which he boasted nobody could escape from.

Miller's faith in his lockup overcame his distrust of the steamfitter-welder combination and he left the brothers unguarded overnight.

He returned to find that Frank and Raymond literally had taken the jail apart. Cell doors were off their hinges, locks broken and twisted and the place in general disorder.

BANDITS GAIN THREE DIAMOND RINGS FROM ST. PAUL MATRON

St. Paul, May 4.—(U.P.)—After firing three shots to frighten their victims, three bandits obtained three diamond rings valued at $2,000 from Mrs. Harry Bernstein last night.

As Mrs. Bernstein and her husband put their automobile in the garage of their Bechwood avenue home, the masked men fired into the air. After Mrs. Bernstein had handed the leader one of her rings, he said, "Come across with the rest; we know you've got 'em."

She handed over her other rings and the men attempted to drive off in the Bernsteins' car. After a few minutes in vainly attempting to start the automobile, they disappeared on foot.

GOVERNMENT TROOPS ARE NOW IN CONTROL OF MADEIRA ISLANDS

SUPPRESS MILITARY REBELLION WHICH PARALYZED ISLANDS FOR WEEKS

DESTROYER SINKS AFTER COLLISION WITH A TRANS-PORT BOAT

Funchal, Madeira, May 4.—(U.P.)—The government troops were in complete control of Madeira today after suppressing the military rebellion which had paralyzed the islands for weeks.

Except for the loss of the destroyer Vouga, which sank after a collision with the transport Pedro Gomes, casualties and damages were comparatively small. Three rebels were killed and 10 others wounded in fighting just before the insurgents surrendered Saturday.

The population, which had sought safety in the mountainous interior, returned to the port and resumed work upon the urging of the civil governor, Captain Cabaco, who was reinstated. Some rebel leaders were still hiding in the hills, others took refuge in the British consulate and others boarded the British cruiser sent here, on the condition that they were to surrender to the government.

SIX UNMASKED MEN ROB MEMPHIS BANK OF $25,000 THIS MORNING

Memphis, Tenn., May 4.—(U.P.)—The Main and Beale street branch of the Union Planters National Bank and Trust Co. was robbed of approximately $25,000 shortly after the opening hour today by six unmasked bandits, three of whom entered the main lobby of the building while their companions guarded the doors and remained in a waiting automobile nearby.

The bandits completed their holdup before the police and fire squads, summoned to the neighborhood by alarm sirens, arrived.

Reno Courts Grind Out Decree Every 10 Minutes

Reno, Nev., May 4.—(U.P.)—At a rate of a little better than one every ten minutes the divorce courts of Washoe county today began to grind out decrees under the new six weeks' residence rule.

The first divorce under the newly enacted statute went to an eastern woman, Mrs. Edith D. P. Reilly, of Dansville, N. Y.

She accused Thomas P. Reilly of cruelty. In a procedure lasting just six minutes she was granted her decree by Judge Ben Currier.

OH THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

Copyright 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Any woman can have her own way and manage her husband—if she only knows how. She can do it and still keep everybody happy in her home, and without the aid of a single tear.

I saw this demonstrated a few days ago by just another smart woman who knows her job. She is lovely and bright and altogether the best wife I've met in years.

Her husband was planning a business trip and she did not want to go along. Did she pout and say she hadn't any clothes and he was a brute to drag her over the desert all the way to the coast, and why hadn't she married the other man and not such a heartless, inconsiderate beast?

No!

She said she would go, and would fit herself out in the last words in togs for the trip. Times are a bit hard and she knew what would register. It did. She was going to put off a lot of things he wanted done, and that registered. She said he would be pretty mean to go without her, and if he did she imagined he would have a pretty fine time and not think of her. This made the men feel attractive and important.

She reminded him they had promised to be the guest of her former fiancé, still a bachelor the next time they visited his city. The ex-fiance was living in a lovely home all alone. She knew he didn't like that man.

The fact is, she did everything that most women would not do, to get out of taking the trip.

The man left for the coast—alone. Men are arbitrary animals. They have that longing to run the ranch. If you make them think they are managing things and having their own way you can always get your way, and this is true in every single case—if you don't count the exceptions. Don't laugh, because that goes for every rule. If ninety nine men out of 100 fall for a thing, you may say the rule works.

I know a woman who wanted a new fur coat. She told her husband at the beginning of the season that Mrs. Jones was getting a beautiful new coat but that she, being inclined to think they should economize a little, wouldn't think of getting one. She liked the old one even if it was a bit too short for this year's styles. And she thought cheap fur coats were not a good buy, because you just had to buy another next year and they always looked tacky. She was so glad she had decided not to buy a new coat.

And every day and in every way she brought up the subject, making herself out such an angel for not getting a coat that her husband insisted—she even dragged her to the store to look at coats.

And the furrier looked wise and trotted out the ones the wife had already picked out and had told him to produce upon her arrival.

What these fur dealers know about women!

It's all so much better than pouting, which doesn't get you anything, and makes everybody miserable. Then, too, only little women can pout. The big ones look so ridiculous.

How do you manage to have your own way at home? I'm sure the women would be glad of any suggestions from their sister wives.

Bright young girls from some of our best families are becoming veronal addicts.

"We can't sleep," they tell me. "We get so tired working all day and dancing all night, that we have to do something. It doesn't hurt you."

everybody takes something. There's not a girl in our set who doesn't take some sort of drug for sleeping. Not much, you know, just a tablet a night."

"Only a tablet a night!" Heaven help them!

If you take veronal "just a tablet a night," I wish you'd read carefully his story of Leila, whom I interviewed in a psychopathic ward, being treated for veronal addiction.

"I never thought it would get me," the girl's tears were bitter. "I started taking it for a few nights, and then I couldn't go to sleep without it and the first thing I knew, I would have stolen to buy it. It's horrible to think of the way it gets you. You can't seem to do anything about it. If I hadn't been told it wouldn't hurt me, I wouldn't have started."

"If I don't get over this," she yung her hands, "I'll jump out of a window or something. The agony is 'rightful'."

It was three weeks to a day that she did jump out of a window and end her torture. She had been out of the hospital only a few days.

With Leila in the hospital was a tear friend, a girl of her own age, hardly out of her teens. Veronal was her poison also.

"If anybody tells you to take drugs to induce sleep don't do it. Take long walks in the fresh air, work hard physically until you are terribly tired, drink warm milk, take warm baths, try going to bed early a few nights, and not worrying about not sleeping."

One of the most insidious things to prevent sleep is worry over the lack of it. One really needs much less than eight hours sleep, and no one needs drugs to "rest them." As a matter of fact, they do exactly the opposite thing. They make you awake so tired that you can hardly drag your feet around, and your mind doesn't work normally. You are dull and stupid and then, when night comes, your nerves are frayed from he drug you took the night before, and the same dose hardly does the work. The first thing you know, you are taking larger doses, and the end is easy to foretell.

A girl with a lot of worry on her mind, but who was smart enough to know that drink never drowned anybody's troubles, tried it recently, and when she became a nervous wreck, the doctors gave her drugs to induce sleep. Now she can't sit still long without fidgeting. She will disappear, for a short time. She is a fine woman, who was struggling to get back to work after a nervous breakdown, and she was taking large doses, and the end is easy to foretell.

I've heard girls tell of veronal tablets they carried with them for "nerves." I've seen women who were working hard, take them because they could not get their minds "at rest." They are pouring torture into their bodies, knowing of what is ahead of them. I wish there was a moving picture of the people I've seen, luring dope investigations, who were addicts and on their way down hill. It would frighten anyone.

OH THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

Copyright 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Any woman can have her own way and manage her husband—if she only knows how. She can do it and still keep everybody happy in her home and without the aid of a single tear.

I saw this demonstrated a few days ago by just another smart woman who knows her job. She is lovely and bright and altogether the best wife I've met in years.

Her husband was planning a business trip and she did not want to go along. Did she pout and say she hadn't any clothes and he was a brute to drag her over the desert all the way to the coast, and why hadn't she married the other man and not such a heartless, inconsiderate beast?

No!

She said she would go, and would fit herself out in the last words in togs for the trip. Times are a bit hard and she knew what would register. It did. She was going to put off a lot of things he wanted done and that registered. She said he would be pretty mean to go without her, and if he did she imagined he would have a pretty fine time and not think of her. This made the men feel attractive and important.

She reminded him they had promised to be the guest of her former fiancé, still a bachelor the next time they visited his city. The ex-fiancee was living in a lovely home all alone. She knew he didn't like that man.

The fact is, she did everything that most women would not do, to get out of taking the trip.

The man left for the coast—alone. Men are arbitrary animals. They have that longing to run the ranch. If you make them think they are managing things and having their own way you can always get your way, and this is true in every single case—if you don't count the exceptions. Don't laugh, because that goes for every rule. If ninety nine men out of 100 fall for a thing, you may say the rule works.

I know a woman who wanted a new fur coat. She told her husband at the beginning of the season that Mrs. Jones was getting a beautiful new coat but that she, being inclined to think they should economize a little, wouldn't think of getting one. She liked the old one even if it was a bit too short for this year's styles. And she thought cheap fur coats were not a good buy, because you just had to buy another next year and they always looked tacky. She was so glad she had decided not to buy a new coat.

And every day and in every way she brought up the subject, making herself out such an angel for not getting a coat that her husband insisted—she even dragged her to the store to look at coats.

And the furrier looked wise and trotted out the ones the wife had already picked out and had told him to produce upon her arrival.

What these fur dealers know about women!

It's all so much better than pouting, which doesn't get you anything, and makes everybody miserable. Then, too, only little women can pout. The big ones look so ridiculous.

How do you manage to have your own way at home? I'm sure the women would be glad of any suggestions from their sister wives.

Bright young girls from some of our best families are becoming veronal addicts.

everybody takes something. There's not a girl in our set who doesn't take some sort of drug for sleeping. Not much, you know, just a tablet a night."

"Only a tablet a night!" Heaven help them!

If you take veronal "just a tablet a night," I wish you'd read carefully his story of Lella, whom I interviewed in a psychopathic ward, being treated for veronal addiction.

"I never thought it would get me," the girl's tears were bitter. "I started taking it for a few nights, and then I couldn't go to sleep without it and the first thing I knew, I would have stolen to buy it. It's horrible to think of the way it gets you. You can't seem to do anything about it. If I hadn't been told it wouldn't hurt me, I wouldn't have started."

"If I don't get over this," she wrung her hands, "I'll jump out of a window or something. The agony is frightful."

It was three weeks to a day that she did jump out of a window and end her torture. She had been out of the hospital only a few days.

With Lella in the hospital was a fair friend, a girl of her own age, hardly out of her teens. Veronal was her poison also.

If anybody tells you to take drugs to induce sleep don't do it. Take long walks in the fresh air, work hard physically until you are terribly tired, drink warm milk, take warm baths, try going to bed early a few nights and not worrying about not sleeping.

One of the most insidious things to prevent sleep is worry over the lack of it. One really needs much less than eight hours sleep, and no one needs drugs to "rest them." As a matter of fact, they do exactly the opposite thing. They make you awake so tired that you can hardly drag your feet around, and your mind doesn't work normally. You are dull and stupid and then, when night comes, your nerves are frayed from he drug you took the night before, and the same dose hardly does the work. The first thing you know, you are taking larger doses, and the end is easy to foretell.

A girl with a lot of worry on her mind, but who was smart enough to know that drink never drowned anybody's troubles, tried it recently and, when she became a nervous wreck, the doctors gave her drugs to induce sleep. Now she can't sit still long without fidgeting. She will disappear, for a short time. She is a fine woman, who was struggling to get back on her feet. Probably would have succeeded with the right care. What will happen to her now I don't know. She wishes she hadn't ever started with drugs. She knows it would have been better to struggle with insomnia and nerves, and take a little longer to get well, than to climb the high bridge of horrors she now travels.

I've heard girls tell of veronal tablets they carried with them for "nerves." I've seen women who were working hard, take them because they could not get their minds "at rest." They are pouring torture into their bodies, knowing of what is ahead of them. I wish there was a moving picture of the people I've seen during dope investigations, who were addicts and on their way down hill. It would frighten anyone.

Health Topics Fine
Now is the time to plan your demonstration team program. Extension agents and leaders are urged to emphasize topics for demonstrations that bring interest to the health work.

The following are a few excellent subjects for the dairy demonstration team:

1. How to use a quart of milk a day.
2. Making and serving cottage cheese.
3. Making and serving cream puffs, cream pie, or other custard dishes.

These are good subjects for the garden teams:

1. An apple a day (show various ways of serving an apple: in salad, baked, etc.)
2. A vegetable salad.
3. Make and serve a creamed vegetable.

Clothing and room furnishing:
1. How to make a bed.
2. Selecting and fitting school shoes.
3. Be your own best exhibit.

The canning demonstration team has an excellent opportunity of emphasizing the health work through such subjects as:

1. Canning tomatoes and how to use them.
2. Canning vegetables for a balanced meal.
3. Canning fruits and how to use them.

T. A. Erickson, Minnesota State Club leader, reports that 22 4H potato clubs in St. Louis county selected or gave from their own products more than 400 bushels of potatoes which were shipped to Arkansas to help those who suffered because of the drought last year.

Stressed Value of Clubs
In a statement immediately following his resignation as chairman of the Federal Farm Board on March 6, Alexander Legge recommended that more attention be given to boys' and girls' clubs. He said, "I would also offer the suggestion that in the future more attention be given to the young folks, particularly the boys' and girls' clubs, who in their competitive contests are learning the value of team work. It does not matter much what becomes of us old fellows who will soon be out of the picture. The problems of the future must be met by the coming generation."

The girls of the Beaver Dam 4H Club met at the school Friday afternoon to take up their sewing project. Laundry bags were started. The next meeting of the club will be held at the school on Tuesday afternoon, May 5. Lunch will be served by the club members.

FLAVOR OF COFFEE

Roasting Process Used Exclusively by Hills Bros.
Insures Uniformity

For years Hills Bros. have enjoyed a distinct advantage in the coffee roasting industry. For they have a patented roasting process that prevents variation in flavor.

The basic principle of the process is roasting "a little at a time." Automatically measured lots of rare blended coffees—about three pounds—are introduced into the roaster in a steady stream and pass along in a continuous flow, roasting a little at a time. The speed of the flow and degree of heat never vary with the result that Hills Bros. Coffee is absolutely uniform.

No other coffee has the same delicious flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee because no other coffee is roasted the same way. This patented process—Controlled Roasting—is radically different from the common bulk-roasting method.

Freshness is assured in Hills Bros. Coffee because it is packed in vacuum cans. By this process, air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is removed from the can and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if airtight, do not keep coffee fresh. Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can.

NEW STANDARD IS SET IN PERFECTING
FLAVOR OF COFFEE

Roasting Process Used Exclusively by Hills Bros.
Insures Uniformity

For years Hills Bros. have enjoyed a distinct advantage in the coffee roasting industry. For they have a patented roasting process that prevents variation in flavor.

The basic principle of the process is roasting "a little at a time." Automatically measured lots of rare blended coffees—about three pounds—are introduced into the roaster in a steady stream and pass along in a continuous flow, roasting a little at a time. The speed of the flow and degree of heat never vary with the result that Hills Bros. Coffee is absolutely uniform.

No other coffee has the same delicious flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee because no other coffee is roasted the same way. This patented process—Controlled Roasting—is radically different from the common bulk-roasting method.

Freshness is assured in Hills Bros. Coffee because it is packed in vacuum cans. By this process, air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is removed from the can and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh. Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can.

New Angle to Mothers Day

THE Golden Rule Foundation, which is promoting a wide observance of Mothers Day by suitable gifts to mothers in need, has recently studied the effect of the present economic depression upon health conditions. Such statistics as were found do not indicate any serious increase of sickness. On the contrary, there has been a decline, in 1930, of the total death rate for the whole country, and in the rate of many notifiable diseases.

The explanation given by public health officers is, first of all, that the particularly dry and mild weather of last year (continued into this) has, to some extent, offset the effects of poverty. Dr. C. E. Winslow, well known professor of public health at Yale University, states that "the population of the United States as a whole suffers physically more from overwork and over-indulgence than from deprivation." Dr. Wilson C. Smillie, professor of public health administration at Harvard University, finds the present health situation comparable with that in the last two periods of unemployment and economic distress, 1915-1916 and 1921-1922. None of them "has had any marked effect in the incidence of tuberculosis, infant mortality or maternal mortality. It is my opinion that the economic stress has not been sufficiently severe or prolonged to affect these indices."

On the other hand, several of the authorities consulted believe that the effects of long continued undernourishment may still become apparent in later statistics or at least off-set the gains that might normally be expected from improved public health measures. Already in the draught area, which has suffered most from reduced family incomes, increases of tuberculosis, pellagra, infant mortality, and other conditions are reported.

The chief danger is that at a time like this minor ailments are likely to be neglected. Empty consulting rooms and diminished attendances at pay-clinics are not necessarily a sign of good health conditions, but may be due for the most part to inability to pay and to follow prescribed treatments. While the doctors stand idle, malnutrition and neglect may produce additional trouble for the future.

The Mothers Fund Committee has been informed that in some cities there has already been a large increase in demands for free treatment and in applications for free hospital beds. In some cases, visiting nurse services that make no charge when the family of the patient is in need have had to increase their staffs. In this situation, suggests the committee, one of the most vital claims upon those who wish to honor their own mothers by contributing to the aid of other mothers is that of the many health agencies which in these days have special difficulty in meeting their budgets.

Death Comes to Editor of Brainerd Tribune

DEATH came to the editor of the Brainerd Tribune Sunday night and stilled his hand. Silent today is his pen. George E. Ericson, Sr., after a courageous fight of five weeks, succumbed to illness.

George, as he was known to his many friends, was especially popular among the newspaper boys, for in 1917, while he conducted the Spooner Northern News, they made him president of the Northern Minnesota Editorial Association. Many remember the annual session held in the north country, when the summer outing was made an especially enjoyable one because of the chairmanship of Mr. Ericson on the committee of arrangements.

One trait which endeared Mr. Ericson to many was his intense love for his family. This extended from his fine family circle at home where his wife was associated with him in the conduct of the Brainerd Tribune, to that of his aged mother in Red Wing, whom he visited whenever occasion permitted.

George was possessed of unfailing good humor and could sense a bright vista beyond the gloomiest cloud. As a newspaper man should be, he was blessed with optimism and reflected that spirit in his papers at Spooner and Brainerd. His family circle soon outgrew him in stature, for he and Mrs. Ericson were blessed with two fine sturdy boys and a lovely girl.

In the Chamber of Commerce Mr. Ericson worked energetically when placed on any committee. His last assignment was on a general committee of publicity and several special committees. He was loyal to his friends and one of his last acts was to intercede with Senator Schall and endeavor to secure an appointment for one of his friends.

He took an interest in the ex-service men and was made an honorary member of the local Spanish American War Veterans Post and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He spent much time and effort championing the bonus for the Spanish American War veterans.

In lodge affiliations he was a member of the local Modern Woodmen of America camp. As a Moose he rose from director to the presidency of the State Association last year and during the Brainerd convention was an active figure in the conduct of that gathering.

PEMBINA, N. D., according to a Duluth stenographer, must be as backward as some old European town when it concerns modern plumbing. It appears, according to the Duluth girl, who refused to stay in Pembina, that there is but one bathtub there. During the world war Andy Gieriet sent in a souvenir postal card from a French town of 50,000 people, remarking that there was one bathtub in town and quite a line of doughboys on hand waiting to use the tub, that is just for the novelty.

THE 1931 session of the legislature set a 16 year record for the small number of laws added to the statutes of the state. Four hundred and twenty were passed. Not since 1915, when the legislature enacted but 386 measures, had so few laws been passed in a session.

THE highly revelatory clothes era ended just in time to keep the girls from utilizing cellophane, says the Arkansas Gazette, always a keen observer and whose witticisms regularly make the Literary Digest column.

EXPERTS say that women's feet are several sizes larger now than they were twenty years ago. That's what comes of trying to fill men's shoes, no doubt, says the Roanoke Times.

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST"

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

The murder of Baroness von Wiese at Eagle's Nest stirred the town of Kingcliffe. Walter Vance, Assistant Chief of Police, is in charge of the investigation, aided by his fiancée, "Bim" Martin, young newspaper reporter. A note, written by the Baroness, is found near the body. Bim recalls seeing the Baroness slip the butler a piece of paper, which he denies. Suspicion is cast on Mary Frost, whose husband, Ted, had flirted with the Baroness. Mary's shawl is found wrapped around the body. Mary claims she was unable to locate the shawl and left with Ted. It develops she returned later for the shawl. Complications arise when it is learned that Laura Allan had borrowed the shawl. Emily Hardy's maid heard the Baroness quarrel with her maid. Bim wonders about the wounds on the head and arm of the Baroness' maid. The jewels of the Baroness have been stolen. Laura says she saw Mary entering the garden wearing her shawl. Bim finds a stone from a man's ring on the Summer house path. Laura denies wearing the shawl.

CHAPTER XIV.

"LIES!" thought Bim wildly. "Lies! Lies! What are they all trying to cover up? They couldn't all have done the murder; they couldn't all know who did it. Yet they've all got something they don't want known—something they want to make seen different. What's happened here is going to change things. It's going to dig into secret places in all their lives and then those places won't be secret any more. We'll all know things we've no right to know; things that will probably make us hate each other. Then what will happen?"

She watched Laura fling herself into her long, sports roadster and drive furiously away; she watched Reynolds and Walter and Em move off to the library and still she lingered in the morning sunshine, pondering the lies she had heard.

Nothing but Lies

First there was the butler's lie last night about a robbery; a lie in which the maid, Jane, concurred after he had put the story in her mouth.

Then Mary hadn't told the truth this morning; she had said that she and Ted went directly home and remained there, whereas first Imogene and now Laura Allan declared they had seen her here an hour later.

Then either Imogene or Jane had lied about the quarrel in the Baroness' dressing room and now Laura Allan had lied about wearing Mary Frost's shawl, for surely Imogene would have no object in telling that story if it were not true. Lies—lies—and why?

Because, Bim concluded, there had been more going on in the Pine Hill crowd than met the eye—more than she suspected—more, no doubt, than anyone suspected.

With a sensation of things crashing all about—Bim wondered if it were her illusions falling—she strolled thoughtfully around to the west wing and paused at the edge of the ravine, gazing down the vine-covered rocks. Then she wandered around the other way, lingering on the southern terrace and finally striking out through the grounds toward the wall at the back of Eagle's Nest.

Em had telephoned the Trents, who had promised to stop by on their way to the village, where they had made an engagement for luncheon; now, while they waited, Walter and Reynolds would be in the library going over the evidence, or lack of it, gathered so far—a tedious process in which Bim had no wish to share.

Giving the Summer house a wide berth, she made her way up the hill and finally came to a stile, up which she climbed to settle herself on the wall.

On the other side of the wall was a narrow, private road, running along the south-western end of the estate. The road had been chopped out of the woods at great trouble and expense and covered with loose pebbles, which sprinkled trees and shrubbery and the long grasses growing all about with dust as fine and white as flour. Bim stared at the road and the whitened verdure and gave herself up to thoughts of the confusion likely to be stirred in Kingcliffe by the chance visit of the Baroness—the unknown woman, whose life had touched Kingcliffe lives so briefly and with what promise to be such disastrous effects before it was snuffed out by a bullet.

An Unfrequented Path

Musing thus, Bim nevertheless was sufficiently alert to wonder idly at tire tracks in the white dust of the road. She had supposed that nothing came on this road excepting the light wagon which the gardener, Terrance O'Toole, drove behind a fat old dobbie back and forth between Lowland Drive and the ravine.

Yet the tire tracks were distinct where the dust had been pressed down beneath the weight of a car and there were two sets of them, showing that the car had run as far as the stile and then backed away. Those which would have been made by the left rear and the right front wheels showed smooth places where the rubber, no doubt, was worn; the left front had been new, for the prints it left, where deep and sharp while unmarked depressions attested to the ancient state of the right tire.

While Bim was speculating on the identity of a driver so foolishly as to take this steep, bumpy road, she heard a crackle in the grounds at her back, and presently turned to see the little gardener, with scythe over his shoulder, his wiry, crooked little legs clambering up the hill.

"You look like Father Time," she called. "Whither away, Terrance?"

"I do be wor-kin' in the woods the day, cuttin' them domed locusts, savin' your presence. And how's the mur-der gettin' on, Miss Bimmy?"

"Not so good, I'm afraid. People forget things they ought to remember, and they remember things that don't count, and there you are. I don't suppose," she asked, hopefully, "you've thought of anything that slipped your mind this morning?"

The old fellow let his scythe fall to the stile with a clatter as he dropped himself on the lower step, and, removing an old straw hat, mopped his head and neck with the bandana.

"I dunno's I have, Miss," he replied, finally. "Whist, now, I said nothin' of me little walk ar-round to the lad, I'm thinkin', not that I was for-geetin', so to speak."

"You took a walk last night, Terrance?" Bim tried to keep excitement out of her tone.

"I did that, Miss Bimmy, what with Maggie's coffee and the wakefulness on me. Just a bit of a str-roll on the road here where it's quiet-like of an evenin'."

"See anyone up here?" "Not a soul. 'Twas late and folks had gone home and to bed—most folks anyways."

"Probably someone was up," Bim suggested, "if you'd known where to look for them."

"They was that," Terrance agreed, winking slyly. "Not that it's forr-the likes of me to be tellin' ye who."

Tactful Words

The old fellow was enjoying himself, Bim saw. He wished to be coaxed and she set about this with a slyness which matched his own.

"You'll tell me, though, won't you? I'm dying to hear. I'll bet—well, I'll bet it was Bunny Baird!" She fastened on Baird at random but saw that she had hit the mark.

One mild blue eye closed as the little man nodded. "Twas that one, Miss Bimmy. Thanks I. 'Tis a night for a r-ramble and I'll betake meself up the hill, and sure enough up the hill I goes till I comes to a light. And there's me fine ar-r-tist's place with his shadow on the blind." He screwed up his face craftily. "Nor that ain't all neither."

"Terrance O'Toole if you don't tell me the rest this minute!" "Well, then, they's another shadow on the blind along of me fine ar-r-tist and it's a lady's shadow!"

"No!" Bim pretended to be overcome as the mild blue eyes watched the effect upon her of this news. "Did you see who the lady was?"

"I did not," regretfully. "That's too bad, Terrance. What time did you say this was?"

"I didn't say, Miss Bimmy, but 'twas somewhere near 'two."

"Well! Well, thanks for the story, Terrance. It's sure a good one."

"It is that." He shouldered his scythe and scrambled away in the woods while Bim tried to guess the identity of the woman who visited Bunny Baird in his bungalow at two o'clock. Laura Allan? But Laura had said she was home and asleep at two o'clock. Besides it didn't sound like the aloof and conservative Laura Allan. Who over it was would deny it; that much was certain.

With a tired little sigh, Bim started back down the hill and arrived at the mansion in time to see a dilapidated old car rattle up the drive and Bob and Millicent Trent get out.

George, as he was known to his many friends, was especially popular among the newspaper boys, for in 1917, while he conducted the Spooner Northern News, they made him president of the Northern Minnesota Editorial Association. Many remember the annual session held in the north country, when the summer outing was made an especially enjoyable one because of the chairmanship of Mr. Ericson on the committee of arrangements.

One trait which endeared Mr. Ericson to many was his intense love for his family. This extended from his fine family circle at home where his wife was associated with him in the conduct of the Brainerd Tribune, to that of his aged mother in Red Wing, whom he visited whenever occasion permitted.

George was possessed of unfailing good humor and could sense a bright vista beyond the gloomiest cloud. As a newspaper man should be, he was blessed with optimism and reflected that spirit in his papers at Spooner and Brainerd. His family circle soon outgrew him in stature, for he and Mrs. Ericson were blessed with two fine sturdy boys and a lovable girl.

In the Chamber of Commerce Mr. Ericson worked energetically when placed on any committee. His last assignment was on a general committee of publicity and several special committees.

He was loyal to his friends and one of his last acts was to intercede with Senator Schall and endeavor to secure an appointment for one of his friends.

He took an interest in the ex-service men and was made an honorary member of the local Spanish American War Veterans Post and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He spent much time and effort championing the bonus for the Spanish American War veterans.

In lodge affiliations he was a member of the local Modern Woodmen of America camp. As a Moose he rose from director to the presidency of the State Association last year and during the Brainerd convention was an active figure in the conduct of that gathering.

PEMBINA, N. D., according to a Duluth stenographer, must be as backward as some old European town when it concerns modern plumbing. It appears, according to the Duluth girl, who refused to stay in Pembina, that there is but one bathtub there. During the world war Andy Gieriet sent in a souvenir postal card from a French town of 50,000 people, remarking that there was one bathtub in town and quite a line of doughboys on hand waiting to use the tub, that is just for the novelty.

THE 1931 session of the legislature set a 16 year record for the small number of laws added to the statutes of the state. Four hundred and twenty were passed. Not since 1915, when the legislature enacted but 386 measures, had so few laws been passed in a session.

THE highly revelatory clothes era ended just in time to keep the girls from utilizing cellophane, says the Arkansas Gazette, always a keen observer and whose witticisms regularly make the Literary Digest column.

EXPERTS say that women's feet are several sizes larger now than they were twenty years ago. That's what comes of trying to fill men's shoes, no doubt, says the Roanoke Times.

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST"

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

The murder of Baroness von Viese at Eagle's Nest stirred the town of Kingcliffe. Walter Vance, Assistant Chief of Police, is in charge of the investigation, aided by his fiancée, "Bim" Martin, young newspaper reporter. A note, written by the Baroness, is found near the body. Bim recalls seeing the Baroness slip the butler a piece of paper, which he denies. Suspicion is cast on Mary Frost, whose husband, Ted, had flirted with the Baroness. Mary's shawl is found wrapped around the body. Mary claims she was unable to locate the shawl and left with Ted. It develops she returned later for the shawl. Complications arise when it is learned that Laura Allan had borrowed the shawl. Emily Hardy's maid heard the Baroness quarrel with her maid. Bim wonders about the wounds on the head and arm of the Baroness' maid. The jewels of the Baroness have been stolen. Laura says she saw Mary entering the garden wearing her shawl. Bim finds a stone from a man's ring on the summer house path. Laura denies wearing the shawl.

CHAPTER XIV.

LIES! thought Bim wildly. "Lies! Lies! What are they all trying to cover up? They couldn't all have done the murder; they couldn't all know who did it. Yet they've all got something they don't want known. Something they want to make seem different. What's happened here is going to change things. It's going to dig into secret places in all their lives and then those places won't be secret any more. We'll all know things we've no right to know; things that will probably make us hate each other. Then what will happen?"

She watched Laura fling herself into her long, sports roadster and drive furiously away; she watched Reynolds and Walter and Em move off to the library and still she lingered in the morning sunshine, pondering the lies she had heard.

Nothing but Lies

First there was the butler's lie last night about a robbery; a lie in which the maid, Jane, concurred after he had put the story in her mouth.

Then Mary hadn't told the truth this morning; she had said that she and Ted went directly home and remained there, whereas first Imogene and now Laura Allan declared they had seen her here an hour later.

Then either Imogene or Jane had lied about the quarrel in the Baroness' dressing room and now Laura Allan had lied about wearing Mary Frost's shawl, for surely Imogene would have no object in telling that story if it were not true. Lies—lies—and why?

Because, Bim concluded, there had been more going on in the Pine Hill crowd than met the eye—more than she suspected—more, no doubt, than anyone suspected. With a sensation of things crashing all about—Bim wondered if it were her illusions falling—she strolled thoughtfully around to the west wing and paused at the edge of the ravine, gazing down the vine-covered rocks. Then she wandered around the other way, lingering on the southern terrace and finally striding out through the grounds toward the wall at the back of Eagle's Nest.

Em had telephoned the Trents, who had promised to stop by on their way to the village, where they had made an engagement for luncheon; now, while they waited, Walter and Reynolds would be in the library going over the evidence, or lack of it, gathered so far—a tedious process in which Bim had no wish to share.

Giving the summer house a wide berth, she made her way up the hill and finally came to a stile, up which she climbed to settle herself on the wall.

On the other side of the wall was a narrow, private road, running along the south-western end of the estate. The road had been chopped out of the woods at great trouble and expense and covered with loose pebbles, which sprinkled trees and shrubbery and the long grasses growing all about with dust as fine and white as flour. Bim stared at the road and the whitened verdure and gave herself up to thoughts of the confusion likely to be stirred in Kingcliffe by the chance visit of the Baroness—the unknown woman, whose life had touched Kingcliffe lives so briefly and with what promise to be such disastrous effects before it was snuffed out by a bullet.

An Unfrequented Path

Musing thus, Bim nevertheless was sufficiently alert to wonder idly at tire tracks in the white dust of the road. She had supposed that nothing came on this road excepting the light wagon which the gardener, Terrance O'Toole, drove behind a fat old dabbler back and forth between Lowland Drive and the ravine.

Yet the tire tracks were distinct where the dust had been pressed down beneath the weight of a car and there were two sets of them, showing that the car had run as far as the stile and then backed away. Those which would have been made by the left rear and the right front wheels showed smooth places where the rubber, no doubt, was worn; the left front tire had been new, for the prints it left were deep and sharp while unmarked depressions attested to the ancient state of the right tire.

While Bim was speculating on the identity of a driver so fool-hardy as to take this steep, bumpy road, she heard a crackle in the grounds at her back, and presently turned to see the little gardener, with scythe over his shoulder, his wiry, crooked little legs clambering up the hill.

"You look like Father Time," she called. "Whither away, Terrance?"

"I do be wor-kin' in the woods the day, cuttin' them dommed locusts, savin' your presence. And how's the mur-der gettin' on, Miss Bimmy?"

"Not so good, I'm afraid. People forget things they ought to remember, and they remember things that don't count, and there you are. I don't suppose," she asked, hopefully, "you've thought of anything that slipped your mind this morning?"

The old fellow let his scythe fall

to the stile with a clatter as he dropped himself on the lower step, and, removing an old straw hat, mopped his head and neck with the bandana.

"I dunno, I have, Miss," he replied, finally. "Whist, now, I said nothin' of me little walk ar-round to the lad, I'm thinkin', not that I was for-geettin', so to speak." "You took a walk last night, Terrance?" Bim tried to keep excitement out of her tone.

"I did that, Miss Bimmy, what with Maggie's coffee and the wakefulness on me. Just a bit of a str-roll on the road here where it's quiet-like of an evenin'."

"See anyone up here?"

"Not a soul. 'Twas late and folks had gone home and to bed—most folks anyways."

"Probably someone was up," Bim suggested, "if you'd known where to look for them."

"They was that," Terrance agreed, winking slyly. "Not that it's for-r the likes of me to be tellin' ye what."

Tactful Words

The old fellow was enjoying himself, Bim saw. He wished to be coaxed and she set about this with a slyness which matched his own.

"You'll tell me, though, won't you? I'm dying to hear. I'll bet—well, I'll bet it was Bunny Baird!" She fastened on Baird at random but saw that she had hit the mark.

One mild blue eye closed as the little man nodded. "Twas that one, Miss Bimmy. Thinks I. 'Tis a night for-r a r-ramble and I'll betake meself up the hill, and sure enough up the hill I goes till I comes to a light. And there's a fine artist's place with his shadow on the blind." He screwed up his face craftily. "Nor that ain't all neither."

"Terrance O'Toole if you don't tell me the rest this minute!"

"Well, then, they's another shadder on the blind along of a fine ar-rist and it's a lady's shadder!"

"No!" Bim pretended to be overcome as the mild blue eyes watched the effect upon her of this news. "Did you see who the lady was?"

"I did not," regretfully.

"That's too bad, Terrance. What time did you say this was?"

"I didn't say, Miss Bimmy, but 'twas somewheres near-r two."

"Well! Well, thanks for the story, Terrance. It's sure a good one."

"It is that." He shouldered his scythe and scrambled away in the woods while Bim tried to guess the identity of the woman who visited Bunny Baird in his bungalow at two o'clock. Laura Allan? But Laura had said she was home and asleep at two o'clock. Besides it didn't sound like the aloof and conservative Laura Allan. Who, over it was would deny it; that much was certain.

With a tired little sigh, Bim started back down the hill and arrived at the mansion in time to see a dilapidated old car rattle up the drive and Bob and Millicent Trent get out.

BASEBALL FEATURED BY INDIVIDUAL WORK IN BIG LEAGUES

PENNANT HOPES OF SOME TEAMS REST ON SPARK PLUGS

GROUP INCLUDES BABE RUTH, HORNSBY, FERRELL, VANCE AND LUQUE

ALSO BIG 5 OF ATHLETICS, SIMMONS, FOX, COCHRANE, EARN-SHAW, GROVE

By DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, May 4.—Baseball, essentially a team game, has been featured in the major leagues this season by individual performances.

Naturally enough the individual players have needed the aid of their mates, but it has become apparent that the pennant prospects of several clubs rest squarely upon the shoulders of star athletes who serve as "spark plugs" for their teams. This group includes Babe Ruth of the Yankees, Rogers Hornsby of the Cubs, Wes Ferrell of Cleveland, Dazzy Vance and Adolfo Luque of the Robins and the "Big Five"—Simmons, Fox, Cochrane, Earnshaw and Grove—of the Athletics.

Ruth returned to the game yesterday after a 10-day layoff because of injuries and aided the New York Yankees to defeat Boston, 8 to 3. The Yankees, in a slump since Ruth was injured, played high class ball and Pitcher Roy Sherid coasted to victory. Ruth retired after the game was on ice, but rapped out two singles, drove in a run and scored once during his five innings of play.

With Dazzy Vance on the mound, the Brooklyn Robins showed their real class for the first time this season and defeated the New York Giants, 4 to 3. Strangely enough, the Robins, noted for poor base running, scored the winning run by clever and daring work on the paths—Fresco Thompson stealing second in the seventh and scoring from there on an infield out.

Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's ace pitcher who has promised to win 30 games and put the Indians in the pennant fight, won his fourth straight victory and his fifth of the season yesterday, defeating Detroit, 7 to 4.

Al Simmons, leader of Philadelphia's Big Five, batted the Athletics to a 4 to 1 triumph over Washington. Simmons' triple in the first accounted for one run and he homered in the ninth for another. Rube Walberg held the Senators to seven hits and was not scored on until the ninth when Cronin homered.

Ray Benge turned in a mound masterpiece to give Philadelphia's Phillies a 4 to 1 victory over Boston. Pinky Whitney accounted for the Phils' first scores with a homer in the second and opened the seventh inning attack that produced two more runs, with a single.

The St. Louis Cardinals made a clean sweep of a three-game series with their most dangerous rivals—the Chicago Cubs—by winning Sunday's game 5 to 4 in 11 innings. The Cards scored four runs in the first and were unable to tally again until Frisch counted on Gelbert's sacrifice in the 11th.

Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati, 6 to 3, in the first game of a double-header, but lost the second, 10 to 5. The victory broke Cincinnati's losing streak of seven consecutive games. Luke Appling, rookie Chicago White Sox shortstop, made three glaring errors which helped St. Louis defeat the Sox, 9 to 5. Two of Appling's bobbles occurred in the sixth inning when the Browns tallied seven runs. Jim Levey, St. Louis' kid shortstop, also made two errors but redeemed himself with a double and a single, scoring two runs and driving in two more.

LESTER PETERSON, MANAGER, SIGNS FAST NINE: HURR ON RECEIVING END

HAROLD ANDERSON, SPEED BALL ARTIST FROM GRANITE FALLS, TO DO HURLING

Braierd's organized fast company baseball team will provide the opposition for Little Falls' opening date at the Falls Sunday, May 24, Lester Peterson, local manager, announced today.

Ray Hurr, who saw action here a few years ago and who later played in a Montana league, will be on the receiving end for the Braierd squad. Harold Anderson will do the mound duty. He comes from Granite Falls and has a good reputation as a speed artist. He is rated a classy right hander.

Wald of Wadena has been signed for shortstop. His acquisition moves Uddenberg to second base. The remainder of the team will be comprised of local talent, Nutting, Hanson, Loom, Jarboe, Fogelstrom, Richmond, Ringer. Manager Peterson announces that the team will meet Crookston and St. Cloud here. The opening home date has not been fixed yet.

ST. PAUL IS NOW LOOP PACE SETTER, DOWNS COLONELS

TROUNCES LOUISVILLE ON LATER'S HOME FIELD 7 TO 1 SUNDAY

KENTUCKIANS FAILED TO SCORE UNTIL THE NINTH INNING

(By United Press)

The Louisville Colonels aren't doing things by halves this season, it seems. Their present string of losses has become as impressive as their victories in the American Association.

St. Paul succeeded the Colonels as loop pace setters by trouncing them, 7 to 1, on the former's field Sunday. Louisville failed to score until the 9th. Walsh and Harris were the opposing pitchers, and the latter had the decisive edge by getting superior support in the pinches. Walsh allowed 10 hits, Harris eight.

Jonnard, Milwaukee pitcher, hurled a three-hit, no run game against Columbus, one of the most imposing mound performances in the league this year. The Brewers won, 3 to 0, getting eight safeties off Baker.

Toledo used six pitchers in taking an 18 to 6 beating from Kansas City. The Blues touched them for 19 hits. All the scoring came in the first six innings.

Statistics on the Minneapolis-Indianapolis clash, with last place loser's portion, included 28 runs, 41 hits and nine pitchers. Indianapolis won, 17 to 11. The six Minneapolis hurlers allowed 22 hits.

Today's schedule:
Toledo at Kansas City.
Indianapolis at Minneapolis.
Louisville at St. Paul.
Columbus at Milwaukee.

EDD ROUSH-- VETERAN OUTFIELD STAR WHO IS BACK WITH CINCINNATI'S REDS ONCE MORE AND EPPA RIXEY-- THE REDS' ANCIENT SOUTHPAW WHO IS STILL ACTIVE!

© 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

WHILE some baseball magnates may question the accuracy of the above headline so far as Eddie Roush is concerned because he was, perhaps, the game's most famous hold-out, the fact is that the veteran outfield star is a Red merely because he's a member of the Cincinnati team. Eddie returned this year after refusing to play all last season because the New York Giants declined to renew his $22,500-a-year contract. They offered Roush $15,000. He balked, held out all year, and was sold last winter back to Reds whence he had come to the Giants in 1927 in exchange for George Kelly.

During his three years as a high-priced Giant, Roush did not meet expectations aroused by his remarkable work at Cincinnati where he had been the ideal ball hawk for several seasons and an excellent hitter. Now Roush—near 38—is attempting a comeback in familiar Red center pastures.

Roush (whose correct baptismal name is Edd, by the way) first won fame with Indianapolis and the Newark Federal League teams. He was sold to the Giants in 1916 and that year he was first traded to the Reds where he did most of his super-starring.

The Reds have another veteran outfielder, Harry Heilmann, who had a good year last season, but an injury will keep him out indefinitely. Therefore, Dan How-ley probably is banking on Nick Cullop and Walter Roettger for regular picket duty. The former has had several trials with both leagues, but he found difficulty in hitting big league pitching. He will get a through trial with the Reds and may make the grade.

Incidentally, Howley is hoping that Eppa Jephtha Rixey, who will be 40 this Sunday, will come through. The biggest of the southpaws (he's 6 foot 6 and weighs 215) is in his nineteenth season as a professional. Rixey may not be able to take a regular turn in the box but pre-season workouts indicate he has still much of the stuff that made him an ace with the Phillies and the Reds for many years.

Richards Himself Again!

"VINNY" RICHARDS ERSTWHILE COURT PRODIGY WHO WILL FACE HIS OLD RIVAL, BIG BILL TILDEN IN A "PRO" TENNIS CLASSIC SHORTLY!

BURNLEY/5/31

FIRST of America's great tennis masters to turn professional was Vincent Richards—who never could beat Bill Tilden in amateur classics, and a year or so afterwards, the celebrated Bill followed "Vinnie's" suit. Before "Big Bill" abandoned his amateur status, Richards defeated the veteran pro, Karei Kozeluh, in a series of matches announced as being for "the championship of the world."

"Vinnie's" victory was a surprise to many who long had rated Kozeluh as the greatest of all court masters. However, the Czechoslovakian wiz has been beaten often by Tilden since the latter turned pro in matches most of which, it should be noted, were played indoors during the past winter.

And now—a series of games has been scheduled between Tilden and Richards, the winner of "the best five matches out of nine" to be acclaimed as the world's pro tennis king. This duel is to start next Saturday in Madison Square Garden, which was packed earlier in the year when Tilden and Kozeluh engaged in their first 1931 contest. It will be continued in other cities and finally be concluded, if all goes well, in one of New York's baseball parks late in June or in July.

It is reported that both Tilden and Richards has each been guaranteed $25,000 with certain percentages if the profits of the tour exceed a stipulated amount.

Jack Curley, wrestling impresario, is promoting the tour just as he did that of Tilden and Kozeluh. How much he made on the latter project has not been disclosed, but the fact that he is launching the Tilden-Richards series indicates that the sport must have fair money-making possibilities.

The fate of pro tennis as a big time attraction will surely depend much on how "Bill" and "Vinnie" make the turnstiles click during their much-vaunted "grudge" dual that are to start this week-end.

BASEBALL FEATURED BY INDIVIDUAL WORK IN BIG LEAGUES

PENNANT HOPES OF SOME TEAMS REST ON SPARK PLUGS

GROUP INCLUDES BABE RUTH, HORNSBY, FERRELL, VANCE AND LUKE

ALSO BIG 5 OF ATHLETICS, SIMMONS, FOX, COCHRANE, EARN-SHAW, GROVE

By DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, May 4.—Baseball, essentially a team game, has been featured in the major leagues this season by individual performances.

Naturally enough the individual players have needed the aid of their mates, but it has become apparent that the pennant prospects of several clubs rest squarely upon the shoulders of star athletes who serve as "spark plugs" for their teams. This group includes Babe Ruth of the Yankees, Rogers Hornsby of the Cubs, Wes Ferrell of Cleveland, Dazzy Vance and Adolfo Luque of the Robins and the "Big Five"—Simmons, Fox, Cochrane, Earnshaw and Grove—of the Athletics.

Ruth returned to the game yesterday after a 10-day layoff because of injuries and aided the New York Yankees to defeat Boston, 8 to 3. The Yankees, in a slump since Ruth was injured, played high class ball and Pitcher Roy Sherid coasted to victory. Ruth retired after the game was on ice, but rapped out two singles, drove in a run and scored once during his five innings of play.

With Dazzy Vance on the mound, the Brooklyn Robins showed their real class for the first time this season and defeated the New York Giants, 4 to 3. Strangely enough, the Robins, noted for poor base running, scored the winning run by clever and daring work on the paths—Fresco Thompson stealing second in the seventh and scoring from there on an infield out.

Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's ace pitcher who has promised to win 30 games and put the Indians in the pennant fight, won his fourth straight victory and his fifth of the season yesterday, defeating Detroit, 7 to 4.

Al Simmons, leader of Philadelphia's Big Five, batted the Athletics to a 3 to 1 triumph over Washington. Simmons' triple in the first accounted for one run and he homered in the ninth for another. Rube Walberg held the Senators to seven hits and was not scored on until the ninth when Cronin homered.

Ray Bengtson turned in a mound masterpiece to give Philadelphia's Phillies a 4 to 1 victory over Boston. Pinkey Whitney accounted for the Phils' first scores with a homer in the second and opened the seventh inning attack that produced two more runs, with a single. The St. Louis Cardinals made a clean sweep of a three-game series with their most dangerous rivals—the Chicago Cubs—by winning Sunday's game 5 to 4 in 11 innings. The Cards scored four runs in the first and were unable to tally again until Frisch counted on Gelbert's sacrifice in the 11th.

Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati, 6 to 3, in the first game of a double-header, but lost the second, 10 to 5. The victory broke Cincinnati's losing streak of seven consecutive games.

Luke Appling, rookie Chicago White Sox shortstop, made three glaring errors which helped St. Louis defeat the Sox, 9 to 5. Two of Appling's bobbles occurred in the sixth inning when the Browns tallied seven runs. Jim Levey, St. Louis' kid shortstop, also made two errors but redeemed himself with a double and a single, scoring two runs and driving in two more.

ST. PAUL IS NOW LOOP PACE SETTER, DOWNS COLONELS

TROUNCES LOUISVILLE ON LATTER'S HOME FIELD 7 TO 1 SUNDAY

KENTUCKIANS FAILED TO SCORE UNTIL THE NINTH INNING

(By United Press)

The Louisville Colonels aren't doing things by halves this season, it seems. Their present string of losses has become as impressive as their victories in the American Association.

St. Paul succeeded the Colonels as loop pace setters by trouncing them, 7 to 1, on the former's field Sunday. Louisville failed to score until the 9th. Walsh and Harris were the opposing pitchers, and the latter had the decisive edge by getting superior support in the pinches. Walsh allowed 10 hits, Harris eight.

Jonnard, Milwaukee pitcher, hurled a three-hit, no run game against Columbus, one of the most imposing mound performances in the league this year. The Brewers won, 3 to 0, getting eight safeties off Baker.

Toledo used six pitchers in taking an 18 to 6 beating from Kansas City. The Blues touched them for 19 hits. All the scoring came in the first six innings.

Statistics on the Minneapolis-Indianapolis clash, with last place the loser's portion, included 28 runs, 41 hits and nine pitchers. Indianapolis won, 17 to 11. The six Minneapolis hurlers allowed 22 hits.

Today's schedule:
Toledo at Kansas City.
Indianapolis at Minneapolis.
Louisville at St. Paul.

Monarch of All He Surveyed

By GENEVRA COOK

BRETT HARLOW, civil engineer, left Bunny Farrell in charge of the gang across the river, and climbed, his surveying instruments over his shoulder, up the craggy hill that overlooked Winding valley.

"I wonder," said Bunny.

"What would your life be like, Bunny, if you weren't wondering something?" laughed one of the fellows on the gang.

"I wonder!" said Bunny. "And I also wonder when that good-looking cousin of mine is going to fall for some girl."

He might well have wondered for, up on the hill, Brett was already slipping. He stood there behind his tripod, happy with the success of his job—the first one he had had complete charge of himself—and gazed whimsically down at the little village nestled at the foot of the mountain, its white church spire rising from sheltering trees, the weatherbeaten gray of old farmhouses moldered to the curves of the hills. "If only," he thought, "if only I were 'monarch of all I survey!'" He drew himself up to his full height of six feet something, stretched out his arm, and said it aloud, strongly. "I am monarch of all I survey!"

"Oh, you are? Well, are you sure?" Brett looked over his shoulder to see the laughing black eyes of a girl looking out at him from between the branches of a big maple. He drew a deep breath, and murmured, looking straight into those sparkling eyes, "No, I'm not sure. But I wish I were!"

"I wonder," said Bunny. "I wonder where Brett's spending his evenings lately."

"You ought to be a detective, Bunny. If you tried to find out, though, he'd give you the sack, cousin and all."

"I wonder," said Bunny.

He discovered Brett sitting on the wide porch rail of a rambling white house set far back among old elms. A slim girl with sparkling black eyes was curled up in the hammock. And beside her was a lean brown young man who looked at her with an air of possession.

"Who's he, I wonder?" thought Bunny.

Brett could have told him that he was George Sampson, who had a prosperous farm in Winding valley, was thirty-two and ready to "settle down," and determined to marry Pamela Shelton.

"George used to come over every Wednesday and Sunday," Pamela told him roguishly on day, "but since you've been putting up your power line in this valley, he comes seven days a week!"

"So will I," answered Brett. And he did.

It was a wonderful summer, with canoeing on the river, dinners at the lodge perched way up on top of the mountain, and long, dreamy evenings with Brett's accordion or Pamela's ukulele. Only that George had a way of having dinner at the lodge on the same night, or of going out in another canoe, or of turning on the Shelton's radio.

But toward the end of the summer Bunny noticed that Brett was looking unhappy, and losing all his old pep. "I wonder . . ." said Bunny.

That night Brett stayed in, brooding unhappily. Bunny, his brows corrugated in a very effective frown, hung himself across the bed.

"Brett, listen. I need advice. What do you think of my getting married this fall?" He gazed sentimentally down at a bit of ribbon that he held in his hand. "She's a wonderful girl!"

Brett's voice was decided. "Don't do it, Bunny." He went on vehemently. "What could you offer a girl? An engineer's got no place in his life for a girl. Just jumping around from pillar to post, from one job to another."

"Maybe she'd like that," suggested Bunny.

Brett sprang to his feet. "Do you think she would?—I mean—" and he sat hastily down again. "But girls like houses and furniture and things."

"Thanks, old chap," said Bunny, as he closed the door quietly behind him. "So that's the trouble—he thinks it wouldn't be fair to her. I wonder."

. . . And he'll be up on the hill tomorrow, and don't you dare tell him I saw you, will you?" finished Bunny, an hour later, as he came blithely down the Sheltons' front steps. "Good night, Pamela."

Up on the hill in the morning Pamela was saying: "Say it!"

"I am monarch of all I survey," whispered Brett huskily.

"Oh, you are? Well, are you sure?" Then, as he hesitated, she whispered softly, her head against his shoulder, "Oh, Brett. Don't you know that you are?"

Bunny glanced reflectively up toward the hill, but he could see only one outline against the gray of the rock. "I wonder," said Bunny.

Tearful Bandit

A lachrymose prowler held up Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Pollard in the lobby of their San Francisco apartment and robbed them of $8. With the money in his hand, he suddenly put his gun away and burst into tears. The Pollards consoled him as best they could. He finally promised to try to get over the grief his conduct had caused him and left—with the $8. The Pollards refused to swear to a complaint.

More Than Million in Twenty States Fed by Red Cross Volunteers

Hot School Lunches and Balanced Rations Given to Drought Victims—Seed Programs Instituted on Wide Scale

More than 1,000,000 persons in 22 drought-stricken counties of 20 States came under the care of the American Red Cross in what developed into the most extensive relief operations in half a century of ministering to stricken humanity.

Measures to lessen the severity of the blow inflicted by drought were taken as early as last September, when seed was distributed to more than 58,000 families for the planting of rye and other pastures, and to more than 27,000 families for the planting of kitchen gardens. The expenditure for this purpose amounted to $325,800. Green vegetables were made available up to the first of January.

Early in February another Red Cross garden program got under way and 507,000 packages of seed were distributed in 15 states. Quarter-acre plots were planted to beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, collard, sweet corn, kale, lettuce, mustard, okra, onions, peas, spinach, squash, tomatoes and turnips. Once again were farm families given the opportunity to participate in their own salvation.

A comparatively mild winter contributed to the success of the Spring and Fall seed campaigns. Many habitual single-croppers were introduced to the advantages of kitchen gardens, balanced cropping and balanced diet. Numerous land-owners have expressed the opinion that this constitutes the one apparent blessing to come out of the drought catastrophe. The United States Department of Agriculture and the local county agricultural agents and home demonstration agents cooperated in making this part of the relief operations outstandingly successful.

Balanced Meals Served

Red Cross feeding was aimed at adequacy and scientific correctness, as well as simple economy. In large numbers of schools, where children were found to be attending with little or nothing in their lunch boxes, hot meals were served at noon. A typical menu consisted of vegetable soup and bread one day; thick beef soup or stew with vegetables another day; cocoa or milk and cheese, peanut butter, or jam sandwiches, a third day.

In some places where lunches were not served in the schools, but were provided for in the regular food orders, each family having school children received extra staples for school lunches including peanut butter, raisins, prunes and tomatoes. Red Cross nutritionists instructed mothers in the preparation of lunches.

County health officers and private physicians commended the adequacy of rations procured on orders issued by Red Cross chapters, which were filled at local stores. Besides the usual staples, such as corn meal, flour, lard, meat, beans and potatoes, such items as canned salmon, cabbage, tomatoes, vegetables and milk were provided, each order being adapted to the special needs of the family for whom it was issued. Where pellagra threatened, eggs, yeast and other preventives were given.

Thousands of Volunteer Workers

Many thousands of volunteers, through their local Red Cross chapters, gave freely of their time, experience and efforts, as in other Red Cross disaster operations. They searched out needy cases in their communities, many persons being restrained from asking assistance because of pride. Chapter committees investigated circumstances, distributed food and clothing.

More than 500 carloads of foodstuffs were contributed. These were given free haulage by railroads. Farmers of more fortunate sections embraced the opportunity to help their pastoral cousins of the affected area. Shipments ranged from live poultry to fish, from grain to grapefruit. Carloads of flour, eggs, beans, vegetables, onions, rice, corn and mixed vegetables were included.

As the result of co-ordinated Red Cross chapter efficiency, not one authentic case of starvation as a result of drought has been uncovered.

Large quantities of new and used clothing were distributed. In direct consequence many school children resumed their studies who had been kept at home for lack of sufficient protection from the elements. In some instances, rural schools that had been closed were enabled to reopen as a result of Red Cross relief work.

States involved were: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia.

Many of these States had been hard hit by a succession of floods, crop failures, low prices and economic depression, and drought constituted a climax to the cycle of distress.

"Wherever I went," wrote one observer, "I made a point of asking what would have happened if the Red Cross had not been able to respond. In widely scattered points, from leading citizens came the answer that undoubtedly there would have been many deaths directly from starvation, with epidemics preying upon the survivors."

TRAFFIC SIGNALS GUIDE BABY SALMON OUT TO SEA

Electric Nets Are Placed in Coast Streams by United States Government.

San Francisco.—Offspring of salmon that spawn in Pacific coast streams, in obedience to the biblical command to be fruitful and multiply, will head toward salt water next spring guided by under-water traffic signals.

Knowing little of the ways of life, the baby fish are being aided by the United States government which is now busy improving its stop and go signals for the unsophisticated salmon.

Late in October and early in November the mother salmon rushed upstream, leaving their salt water spawning places for the time being. In fresh water eggs were laid. Sometime in December the eggs will hatch but the newcomers will remain in the streams until next spring.

Aided by the current, resulting from the full stream, the little fish will put out to sea for the first time. Between their birthplace and open water there lies many a hazard.

Blind ditches and shallow creeks are the principal danger to baby fish. In these ditches and creeks they sometimes stray and wander about aimlessly, vainly seeking big water.

It is such a hazard that Uncle Sam seeks to prevent. So electrically charged wire nets are placed over the mouths of these ditches and streams. When the young salmon strikes the net he turns back to the river channel.

Dodging the electric shocks, the salmon ultimately reaches the sea.

Thousands of dollars are expended annually by Uncle Sam, the task of getting the baby salmon safely out of the spawning grounds being his contribution to the fishing industry.

Army Surveys Site for Proposed Nicaragua Canal

Washington.—Under a tropical sun, the United States army corps of engineers is surveying a route across Nicaragua for a canal to supplement the famous Panama waterway. Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers, said in his annual report.

Maj. Dan I. Sultan, formerly connected with the office of the engineering chief here, is in direct charge, assisted by the Twenty-ninth engineers and parts of the First and Eleventh engineers.

The survey, which supplements and modernizes one made thirty years ago, was authorized by congress in March, 1929. Whether or not a Nicaraguan canal will be built at any time in the near future is a moot subject among both engineers and statesmen, but the government is anxious to collate all data necessary to the work should it be authorized.

"Preliminary plans and estimates," Brown said, "are being made for a canal of suitable dimensions for the larger commercial vessels and increased traffic of today and that which may reasonably be anticipated in the future."

Brown's report showed the commissioned strength of the engineering corps is 556 and the enlisted strength 4,674.

England Tests Steam

Cooling Airplane Motor

London.—Aircraft equipped with a complete system of steam cooling for the engine, has successfully passed secret flying tests at an aerodrome near London according to British aviation experts.

These tests may bring about a sweeping change in both commercial and military aviation. The trials included, in addition to the usual speed and climb to great heights, elaborate aerobatic tests.

Water cooled aero engines have encountered criticism because of the weight of water carried and the possible vulnerability of a water system with pipes and a large radiator in air fighting.

In case the water cooling system is damaged a rapid loss of water takes place, thus depriving the airplane of practically all its motive power.

Another advantage credited to steam cooling is that the engine has a water radiator is eliminated and the resistance to movement through the air is correspondingly reduced.

Feminism Increases

Divorces in Turkey

Stambul, Turkey.—The progress of feminism is largely responsible for the vastly increased number of divorce suits in months.

A woman's work is no longer restricted to the home, even in Turkey. Family life is afflicted with a certain uneasiness and notable evidence of this is to be found in the street sales of 2-cent booklets of the marriage and divorce law.

Repudiation is no longer the privilege of the husband, but many suits brought by wives have no motive beyond the desire for freedom. Some 25 cases are being brought before the Stambul courts daily, but of these only 15 per cent are successful.

Monarch of All He Surveyed

By GENEVRA COOK

(Copyright.)

BRETT HARLOW, civil engineer, left Bunny Farrell in charge of the gang across the river, and climbed, his surveying instruments over his shoulder, up the craggy hill that overlooked Winding valley.

"I wonder," said Bunny.

"What would your life be like, Bunny, if you weren't wondering something?" laughed one of the fellows on the gang.

"I wonder!" said Bunny. "And I also wonder when that good-looking cousin of mine is going to fall for some girl."

He might well have wondered for, up on the hill, Brett was already slipping. He stood there behind his tripod, happy with the success of his job—the first one he had had complete charge of himself—and gazed whimsically down at the little village nestled at the foot of the mountain, its white church spire rising from sheltering trees, the weatherbeaten gray of old farmhouses molded to the curves of the hills. "If only," he thought, "if only I were 'monarch of all I survey!'" He drew himself up to his full height of six feet something, stretched out his arm, and said it aloud, strongly. "I am monarch of all I survey!"

"Oh, you are? Well, are you sure?"

Brett looked over his shoulder to see the laughing black eyes of a girl looking out at him from between the branches of a big maple. He drew a deep breath, and murmured, looking straight into those sparkling eyes, "No, I'm not sure. But I wish I were!"

"I wonder," said Bunny. "I wonder where Brett's spending his evenings lately."

"You ought to be a detective, Bunny. If you tried to find out, though, he'd give you the sack, cousin and all."

"I wonder," said Bunny.

He discovered Brett sitting on the wide porch rail of a rambling white house set far back among old elms. A slim girl with sparkling black eyes was curled up in the hammock. And beside her was a lean brown young man who looked at her with an air of possession.

"Who's he, I wonder?" thought Bunny.

Brett could have told him that he was George Sampson, who had a prosperous farm in Winding valley, was thirty-two and ready to "settle down," and determined to marry Pamela Shelton.

"George used to come over every Wednesday and Sunday," Pamela told him roughly on day, "but since you've been putting up your power line in this valley, he comes seven days a week!"

"So will I," answered Brett. And he did.

It was a wonderful summer, with canoeing on the river, dinners at the lodge perched way up on top of the mountain, and long, dreamy evenings with Brett's accordion or Pamela's ukulele. Only that George had a way of having dinner at the lodge on the same night, or of going out in another canoe, or of turning on the Shelton's radio.

But toward the end of the summer Bunny noticed that Brett was looking unhappy, and losing all his old pep. "I wonder..." said Bunny.

That night Brett stayed in, brooding unhappily. Bunny, his brows corrugated in a very effective frown, flung himself across the bed.

"Brett, listen. I need advice. What do you think of my getting married this fall?" He gazed sentimentally down at a bit of ribbon that he held in his hand. "She's a wonderful girl!"

Brett's voice was decided. "Don't do it, Bunny." He went on vehemently. "What could you offer a girl? An engineer's got no place in his life for a girl. Just jumping around from pillar to post, from one job to another."

"Maybe she'd like that," suggested Bunny.

Brett sprang to his feet. "Do you think she would?—I mean—" and he sat hastily down again. "But girls like houses and furniture and things."

"Thanks, old chap," said Bunny, as he closed the door quietly behind him. "So that's the trouble—he thinks it wouldn't be fair to her. I wonder..."

... And he'll be up on the hill tomorrow, and don't you dare tell him I saw you, will you?" finished Bunny, an hour later, as he came blithely down the Sheltons' front steps. "Good night, Pamela."

Up on the hill in the morning Pamela was saying: "Say it!"

"I am monarch of all I survey," whispered Brett huskily.

"Oh, you are? Well, are you sure?" Then, as he hesitated, she whispered softly, her head against his shoulder, "Oh, Brett. Don't you know that you are?"

Bunny glanced reflectively up toward the hill, but he could see only one outline against the gray of the rock. "I wonder," said Bunny.

Tearful Bandit

He finally promised to try to get over the grief his conduct had caused him and left—with the $8. The Pollards refused to swear to a complaint.

More Than Million in Twenty States Fed by Red Cross Volunteers

Hot School Lunches and Balanced Rations Given to Drought Victims—Seed Programs Instituted on Wide Scale

More than 1,000,000 persons in 862 drought-stricken counties of 26 States came under the care of the American Red Cross in what developed into the most extensive relief operations in half a century of ministering to stricken humanity.

Measures to lessen the severity of the blow inflicted by drought were taken as early as last September, when seed was distributed to more than 58,000 families for the planting of rye and other pastures, and to more than 27,000 families for the planting of kitchen gardens. The expenditure for this purpose amounted to $326,800. Green vegetables were made available up to the first of January.

Early in February another Red Cross garden program got under way and 507,000 packages of seed were distributed in 15 states. Quarter-acre plots were planted to beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, collard, sweet corn, kale, lettuce, mustard, okra, onions, peas, spinach, squash, tomatoes and turnips. Once again were farm families given the opportunity to participate in their own salvation.

A comparatively mild winter contributed to the success of the Spring and Fall seed campaigns. Many habitual single-croppers were introduced to the advantages of kitchen gardens, balanced cropping and balanced diet. Numerous land-owners have expressed the opinion that this constitutes the one apparent blessing to come out of the drought catastrophe. The United States Department of Agriculture and the local county agricultural agents and home demonstration agents co-operated in making this part of the relief operations outstandingly successful.

Balanced Meals Served

Red Cross feeding was aimed at adequacy and scientific correctness, as well as simple economy. In large numbers of schools, where children were found to be attending with little or nothing in their lunch boxes, hot meals were served at noon. A typical menu consisted of vegetable soup and bread one day; thick beef soup or stew with vegetables another day; cocoa or milk and cheese, peanut butter, or jam sandwiches, a third day.

In some places where lunches were not served in the schools, but were provided for in the regular food orders, each family having school children received extra staples for school lunches including peanut butter, raisins, prunes and tomatoes. Red Cross nutritionists instructed mothers in the preparation of lunches.

County health officers and private physicians commended the adequacy of rations procured on orders issued by Red Cross chapters, which were filled at local stores. Besides the usual staples, such as corn meal, flour, lard, meat, beans and potatoes, such items as canned salmon, cabbage, tomatoes, vegetables and milk were provided, each order being adapted to the special needs of the family for whom it was issued. Where pellagra threatened, eggs, yeast and other preventives were given.

Thousands of Volunteer Workers

Many thousands of volunteers, through their local Red Cross chapters, gave freely of their time, experience and efforts, as in other Red Cross disaster operations. They searched out needy cases in their communities, many persons being restrained from asking assistance because of pride. Chapter committees investigated circumstances, distributed food and clothing.

More than 500 carloads of foodstuffs were contributed. These were given free haulage by railroads. Farmers of more fortunate sections embraced the opportunity to help their pastoral cousins of the affected area. Shipments ranged from live poultry to fish, from grain to grapefruit. Carloads of flour, eggs, beans, vegetables, onions, rice, corn and mixed vegetables were included.

As the result of co-ordinated Red Cross chapter efficiency, not one authentic case of starvation as a result of drought has been uncovered.

Large quantities of new and used clothing were distributed. In direct consequence many school children resumed their studies who had been kept at home for lack of sufficient protection from the elements. In some instances, rural schools that had been closed were enabled to reopen as a result of Red Cross relief work.

States involved were: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia.

Many of these States had been hard hit by a succession of floods, crop failures, low prices and economic depression, and drought constituted a climax to the cycle of distress.

"Wherever I went," wrote one observer, "I made a point of asking what would have happened if the Red Cross had not been able to respond. In widely scattered points, from leading citizens came the answer that undoubtedly it would have been many deaths directly from starvation, with epidemics preying upon the survivors."

TRAFFIC SIGNALS GUIDE BABY SALMON OUT TO SEA

Electric Nets Are Placed in Coast Streams by United States Government.

San Francisco.—Offspring of salmon that spawn in Pacific coast streams, in obedience to the biblical command to be fruitful and multiply, will head toward salt water next spring guided by under-the-water traffic signals.

Knowing little of the ways of life, the baby fish are being aided by the United States government which is now busy improving its stop and go signals for the unsophisticated salmon.

Late in October and early in November the mother salmon rushed upstream, leaving their salt water roaming places for the time being. In fresh water eggs were laid. Sometime in December the eggs will hatch but the newcomers will remain in the streams until next spring.

Aided by the current, resulting from the full stream, the little fish will put out to sea for the first time. Between their birthplace and open water there lies many a hazard.

Blind ditches and shallow creeks are the principal danger to baby fish. In these ditches and creeks they sometimes stray and wander about aimlessly, vainly seeking big water.

It is such a hazard that Uncle Sam seeks to prevent. So electrically charged wire nets are placed over the mouths of these ditches and streams. When the young salmon strikes the net he turns back to the river channel.

Dodging the electrical shocks, the salmon ultimately reaches the sea.

Thousands of dollars are expended annually by Uncle Sam, the task of getting the baby salmon safely out of the spawning grounds being his contribution to the fishing industry.

Army Surveys Site for Proposed Nicaragua Canal

Washington.—Under a tropical sun, the United States army corps of engineers is surveying a route across Nicaragua for a canal to supplement the famous Panama waterway. Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers, said in his annual report.

Maj. Dan I. Sultan, formerly connected with the office of the engineering chief here, is in direct charge, assisted by the Twenty-ninth engineers and parts of the First and Eleventh engineers.

The survey, which supplements and modernizes one made thirty years ago, was authorized by congress in March, 1929. Whether or not a Nicaraguan canal will be built at any time in the near future is a moot subject among both engineers and statesmen, but the government is anxious to collate all data necessary to the work should it be authorized.

"Preliminary plans and estimates," Brown said, "are being made for a canal of suitable dimensions for the larger commercial vessels and increased traffic of today and that which may reasonably be anticipated in the future."

Brown's report showed the commissioned strength of the engineering corps is 556 and the enlisted strength 4,674.

tion would result in future cases where handbills are allowed to be scattered about the streets.

Such action followed distribution of bills over the week-end, causing thousands of bills to flutter about the streets and give them an unkempt appearance.

Chief Templeton said complaints would be made against parties sponsoring the bills.

WINDS INCREASE PERIL OF FLAMES

Sunday Outbreak Does Heavy Damage to Townships in Cass,
Morrison Counties

PROPERTY AT HUBERT HIT
Forestry Men Rally to Save Cottages
Endangered at Lake
Alexander

Strong winds fanned brush, timber and meadow fires into new and more serious proportions today while all men of the Minnesota Forestry Service in this district were patrolled to sections to quell the danger now existing and to prevent further outbreaks.

Six hundred acres were burned over in Sections 25 and 26 of Ansel township Sunday and the flames still continue. Fire also burned over 400 acres in McKinley township of Cass county.

Fire fighters in Darling and Parker townships of Morrison county reported flames now under control after sweeping over 1,000 acres.

Forestry men concentrated their forces and brought the flames under control in the Scandia Valley, several cottages being threatened on Lake
Alexander.

A fire sprung up this morning in Daggett Brook township.

Careless burning of leaves was blamed Sunday for the destruction of a garage and ice house at the cottage of George Rehme, Minneapolis, at his summer dwelling on Hubert Lake.

Winnipeg, Man., May 4.—(U.P.)—Rain storms and moderating winds lessened fire hazards in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta today after large crews of fire fighters battled spreading flames over the week end.

Sleet and rain and generally colder weather smothered scattered forest fires in northern Alberta and indications of rain today promised to quench a few still smoldering blazes.
Millions of feet of lumber were destroyed by the fires, although no definite estimate of loss could be made.

Cessation of strong winds allowed forest rangers today to insure the safety of the Lake Winnipeg resort section, threatened three times yesterday by encircling bush fires. Twice fire fighters had the flames apparently under control and after returning to the resort were called out to fight fresh outbreaks.

Residents and campers were forced to flee as the fires swept up to within a quarter of a mile of the resort late last night.

St. Paul, May 4.—(U.P.)—Forest fires, aided by brisk winds in some districts, continued to spread destruction across northern Minnesota today.

Officials of the forestry department here predicted that "anything may happen" if the winds increase in velocity. Several rainless days with low humidity had left woods and brush lands in tinder-dry condition, it was said.

A peat fire burning under ground in a wide section near Aitkin added to the problems of hundreds of fire fighters.

Many new fires were reported to have broken out over the week end.
All of them were brought under control, it was said, and several were extinguished.

The most serious blaze was east of Northome, Minn., where more than 6,000 acres of second growth timber and brush land has been burned over.
Sam Balm, a settler, was found suffocated to death near Northome Saturday.

Other serious fires were reported from the lake country north of Brainerd and in Bull Moose township also near Brainerd. The weather bureau tomorrow, giving hope to fire fighters predicted showers for late today and settlers.

Forecast of showers provided a ray of hope for the more than 2,000 men fighting forest fires spread over a 12-000 acre area.

Rain at this time will put a damper
on one of the worst spring fire menaces in the state's history. Grover
T. Conzet state forester, said as he left for the fire zone to take personal charge of the battle against the flames.

Moose, One Time Head of Northern Minnesota Editors

George E. Ericson, Sr., editor of the Brainerd Tribune since 1925, succumbed to blood poisoning at 8:30 p. m. Sunday at his home, 504 North Fourth street. He was 56 years old being born October 11, 1874 at Red Wing, Minn.

His fatal condition was originally brought on by a carbuncle. His suffering extended for five weeks. The turn for the worse came last Thursday.

Mr. Ericson was widely known in the editorial profession and in lodge work in the state. In 1917 while he was editor of the Spooner Northern News he was president of the Northern Minnesota Editorial Association and last year was elected president of the State Association of the Loyal Order of Moose. Previously to residing at Spooner he lived at Argyle, Minn., for seven years starting in 1899.

Surviving besides his widow, Mrs. Lily A. Ericson, are two sons, George E. Jr., employee of the Minnesota Forestry Department in this district; Toger, a senior in the mining class of the University of Minnesota; and one daughter, Sylvia, student at Carleton College at Northfield. He also leaves his mother, Mrs. John F. Ericson and brother, Wm. M. Ericson, Judge of Probate, Red Wing; and two sisters, Mrs. E. P. Canfield, Floodwood, Minn., and Mrs. James P. Mason, Culver City, Calif.

Funeral rites will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p. m. from the Moose hall. Interment will be at Evergreen cemetery.

Youngsters to Appear in Spring Recital

Little five year old Marion Moulster, Miss Elizabeth Johnstone's youngest pupil, who has studied piano for about a year, and also an outstanding pupil of Miss Anita Hartzburg's dancing class will be seen and heard Friday evening in the spring frolic recital for the Whittier P. T. A. at the high school auditorium. She will do a solo tap dance and will play the piano for the entire class to tap dance and will also appear in two group dances.

In one group Betty Marie Mathis will do a solo dance and in the other group the two will appear with little "Nanny Bobs" Hitch, Donna Jean Olson and Alice Hagen, with Nancy Hitch doing the solo dance.

Those who saw the "Ballet of Coppelia" last year will be interested in seeing the advancement of those taking part that time—Geraldine Bogdanos, Beth Pulkabek, Elaine Weisz, Donna Marie Tyholm and Bernice Steinfeldt.

Winifred Loom and Betty Marie Mathis will take important parts in Miss Johnstone's part of the program as well as Miss Hartzburg's. Winifred is also a "blues singer" singing to the accompaniment of her sister Evelyn Loom. Evelyn will accompany the darkie group at the piano.

There will also be sailor boys with Richard Anderson as spokesman. There will be dolls in the toy shop and toyland scenes.

Mrs. C. L. Burnett is training Miss Johnstone's pupils in their speaking parts.

Dog Bites Child in Face

Marvin Kunde, three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kunde, South Fifth street, was so seriously bitten Sunday by a dog that he was taken to the St. Joseph's hospital for treatment.

The child was at the John Nelson farm in Woodrow. According to the report here the dog bit him when he touched the dog's sore paw which the animal caught in a trap previously.

CIVIL SERVICE ROLL AT PEAK

Classified Employees Total
Is the Highest Since
World War.

Washington.—More civil service employees are on the payroll today than at any time since the World war. It was revealed in the civil service commission's report to congress.

"There were," the report stated, "608,915 employees in the executive civil service on June 30, 1930, as against 587,665 at the end of the last fiscal year, a net increase of 21,250 employees."

"There are now 462,083 positions subject to competitive examination under the civil service act, a gain of 16,126 during the year."

Veteran preference regulations, it is stated, have resulted in the appointment of 150,232 veterans to the classified service since 1919, this figure representing 24.64 per cent of all appointments; and from the issuance, March 3, 1923, of the executive order providing for a 10 point preference for disabled veterans, up to June 30 of this year, 9,258 disabled veterans were appointed, of whom 1,892 were appointed in the last year.

The greatest gain during the year of 10,211 employees, was made by the Department of Commerce, accounted for in large part by the temporary force of census workers; and the greatest reduction of personnel, a total of 2,879, was made by the Navy department. A few establishments show a slight decline.

Postal Workers Increased.

The War department increased its force by 3,022, the Panama canal by 2,202, the Interior department by 2,001 and the Department of Agriculture by 1,741.

The postal service, with 316,995 employees, had a net increase of 2,200, and the other services of 19,050 during the year.

Women, according to the report, "are making rapid and substantial advances in federal establishments."

The commission renewed its recommendations for restoration to the classified service of the positions of deputy collector of internal revenue and deputy marshal, and its extension to include field Presidential positions which are non-policy determining, such as collectors of internal revenue and customs, and postmasters, dispensing with confirmation by the senate.

Progress of Women Noted.

Emphasizing its policy in the matter of extensions under the retirement law, the commission reaffirms its belief that "in order to effectuate the primary purpose of the act, continuance for more than four years beyond retirement age must be confined to those employees who are engaged on important work which cannot be satisfactorily completed without them."

It is recognized, the report states, "that the separation of an experienced employee still able to serve acceptably after he is four years past retirement age is a loss to the government; but it must be borne to secure relief from the greater losses resulting from superannuation in the service."

Discussing the results of fingerprints in keeping undesirable applicants out of the federal service, the commission reports that "5,037 of these persons had police records, either minor or serious."

Jail Mutineers on Yacht of Wealthy American

London.—Chinese ringleaders of a recent mutiny at Singapore aboard the American auxiliary yacht Shenandoah, owned by Gibson Fahnstock, were sentenced to a month's imprisonment. The Chinese were closing in on the captain when Fahnstock, a New York and Washington millionaire, took a hand and helped the officers herd the crew back to their quarters, where they were subdued. Fahnstock's wife and daughter and two other women were aboard.

U. S. Apprentices Wed; Lose Printing Jobs

Washington.—Five young men who married in haste were given an opportunity to repent at leisure. They were apprentices at the government printing office, where Public Printer George H. Carter has a hard and fast rule that there shall be no marrying or giving in marriage during the apprenticeship period. Their forced resignations were "without prejudice" to future civil service positions.

Ardmore, Okla.—A shot gun accidentally discharged by the paw of a playful dog killed Mrs. A. J. Hardy of this place.

Pee-Wee Money Soon Wears Out, U. S. Finds

Washington.—The Treasury department is worried because the new small size paper money apparently is not lasting as long as the larger bills, a house committee was told. The treasury is getting back more $5 bills and fewer $20 than with the larger money.

Royal Visit to White House

At the historic portals of the White House, which never before have been entered by an absolute monarch, King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambai Barnai, of Siam, are pictured on the occasion of their visit to the executive mansion. With the royal visitors are Colonel Campbell Hodges, (left) aide to the President, and Richard Southgate, (right) of the Department of State.

Lion Cub Mangles Child

"Gen. Jan Smut," the lion cub that clawed six-year-old Vivian Lechner (inset), during a natural history lesson at the Whittier School, Cincinnati, Ohio. The child's scalp was so badly torn that 50 stitches were required. Large gashes were also torn in her arm, shoulder, face and parts of her body. The heroism of William Hunter, janitor, in leaping on the animal's back probably saved her from being killed.

Quizzing "Killer" Nannery

Parking an expensive car at the wrong side of the street plus the active mind of a village cop resulted in the capture of "Killer" James Nannery, once labeled as "the most dangerous man alive." Nannery squirmed his way out of Sing Sing in 1928, and has since been sought in the most sensational crimes of the past decade. He is pictured above being questioned by the police. Behind him is his captor, Patrolman Charles Ripley, of Dover, N. J., and Trooper Sergeant Volley, while a stenographer takes his confession. New Jersey authorities are preparing to hold him as a candidate for his own electric chair, while New York State seeks him to answer three murder charges.

FORMULA FOR GETTING OUT OF JAIL WORKS

Superior, Wis., May 4.—(UP)—Percy Lambert's formula for getting out of jail worked again and police today were seeking him for the third time for the same charge within a year. Lambert asked Jailer Edward C. Mow to have some medicine delivered to his cell. When the package came, Lambert feigned illness to lure the messenger inside the cell. Then arising quickly he pushed the door against the messenger and fled.

Last September Lambert used the same method of escaping. Lambert was awaiting sentence on a forgery charge.

Supreme Court Adjourns Today Until May 18

Washington, May 4.—(UP)—The supreme court adjourned today until Monday, May 18, when it will sit only to read opinions. It will sit on the following two Mondays for the same purpose and will adjourn June 10 for the term. The fall term will start Oct. 5.

Fashions for the Smart Woman

A GRACEFUL YOKE

It's a bridesmaid-y looking frock, lovely enough to wear at a wedding, but it is also simple enough to be appropriate and chic for restaurants, evening parties and formal afternoon occasions since it has such new points of loveliness as a fitted yoke from which there is a brief irregular berth and long scarf ends. For afternoon, it is most attractive in lace or printed chiffon. For evening the soft fabrics which lend themselves to the svelte lines are triple georgette, crepe satin, mousseline de soie, chiffon. The sheer cottons offer a wide selection that is interesting and inexpensive.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding, protruding piles are caused by bad circulation of the blood in the affected parts. The parts become weak, flabby, almost dead. Only an internal remedy can remove the cause—that's why salves, suppositories and cutting fail. Dr. Leonard's prescription, HEM-ROID, succeeds because it removes congestion, restores circulation, heals and strengthens the diseased parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record of quickly ending even piles of long standing, that H. P. Dunn, Johnson's Pharmacy says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your pile agony or money back. advt.

CIVIL SERVICE ROLL AT PEAK

Classified Employees Total
Is the Highest Since World War.

Washington.—More civil service employees are on the payrolls today than at any time since the World war. It was revealed in the civil service commission's report to congress.

"There were," the report stated, "608,915 employees in the executive civil service on June 30, 1930, as against 587,065 at the end of the last fiscal year, a net increase of 21,850 employees."

"There are now 462,083 positions subject to competitive examination under the civil service act, a gain of 16,126 during the year."

Veteran preference regulations, it is stated, have resulted in the appointment of 159,332 veterans to the classified service since 1919, this figure representing 24.64 per cent of all appointments; and from the issuance, March 3, 1923, of the executive order providing for a 10 point preference for disabled veterans, up to June 30 of this year, 9,258 disabled veterans were appointed, of whom 1,892 were appointed in the last year.

The greatest gain during the year of 102,111 employees, was made by the Department of Commerce, accounted for in large part by the temporary force of census workers; and the greatest reduction of personnel, a total of 2,879, was made by the Navy department. A few establishments show a slight decline.

Postal Workers Increased.

The War department increased its force by 3,022, the Panama canal by 2,202, the Interior department by 2,001 and the Department of Agriculture by 1,741.

The postal service, with 316,995 employees, had a net increase of 2,200, and the other services of 19,050 during the year.

Women, according to the report, "are making rapid and substantial advances in federal establishments."

The commission renewed its recommendations for restoration to the classified service of the positions of deputy collector of internal revenue and deputy marshal, and its extension to include field Presidential positions which are non-policy determining, such as collectors of internal revenue and customs, and postmasters, dispensing with confirmation by the senate.

Progress of Women Noted.

Emphasizing its policy in the matter of extensions under the retirement law, the commission reaffirms its belief that "in order to effectuate the primary purpose of the act, continuance for more than four years beyond retirement age must be confined to those employees who are engaged on important work which cannot be satisfactorily completed without them."

It is recognized, the report states, "that the separation of an experienced employee still able to serve acceptably after he is four years past retirement age is a loss to the government; but it must be borne to secure relief from the greater losses resulting from superannuation in the service."

Discussing the results of fingerprints in keeping undesirable applicants out of the federal service, the commission reports that "5,037 of these persons had police records, either minor or serious."

Jail Mutineers on Yacht of Wealthy American

London.—Chinese ringleaders of a recent mutiny at Singapore aboard the American auxiliary yacht Shenandoah, owned by Gibson Fahnestock, were sentenced to a month's imprisonment. The Chinese were closing in on the captain when Fahnestock, a New York and Washington millionaire, took a hand and helped the officers herd the crew back to their quarters, where they were subdued. Fahnestock's wife and daughter and two other women were aboard.

U. S. Apprentices Wed; Lose Printing Jobs

Washington.—Five young men who married in haste were given an opportunity to repent at leisure. They were apprentices at the government printing office, where Public Printer George H. Carter has a hard and fast rule that there shall be no marrying or giving in marriage during the apprenticeship period. Their forced resignations were "without prejudice" to future civil service positions.

Dog Fires Fatal Shot

Ardmore, Okla.—A shot gun accidentally discharged by the paw of a playful dog killed Mrs. A. J. Hardy of this place.

Pee-Wee Money Soon Wears Out, U. S. Finds

Washington.—The Treasury department is worried because the new small size paper money apparently is not lasting as long as the larger bills, a house committee was told. The treasury is getting back more $5 bills and fewer $20 than with the larger money.

Royal Visit to White House

At the historic portals of the White House, which never before have been entered by an absolute monarch, King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambai Barnai, of Siam, are pictured on the occasion of their visit to the executive mansion. With the royal visitors are Colonel Campbell Hodges, (left) aide to the President, and Richard Southgate, (right) of the Department of State.

Lion Cub Mangles Child

"Gen. Jan. Smut," the lion cub that clawed six-year-old Vivian Leichner (inset), during a natural history lesson at the Whittier School, Cincinnati, Ohio. The child's scalp was so badly torn that 50 stitches were required. Large gashes were also torn in her arm, shoulder, face and parts of her body. The heroism of William Hunter, janitor, in leaping on the animal's back probably saved her from being killed.

Quizzing "Killer" Nannery

Parking an expensive car at the wrong side of the street plus the active mind of a village cop resulted in the capture of "Killer" James Nannery, once labeled as "the most dangerous man alive." Nannery squirmed his way out of Sing Sing in 1928, and has since been sought in the most sensational crimes of the past decade. He is pictured above being questioned by the police. Behind him is his captor, Patrolman Charles Ripley, of Dover, N. J., and Trooper Sergeant Volley, while a stenographer takes his confession. New Jersey authorities are preparing to hold him as a candidate for its own electric chair, while New York State seeks him to answer three murder charges.

FORMULA FOR GETTING OUT OF JAIL WORKS

Superior, Wis., May 4.—(UP)—Percy Lambert's formula for getting out of jail worked again and police today were seeking him for the third time for the same charge within a year. Lambert asked Jailer Edward C. Mow to have some medicine delivered to his cell. When the package came, Lambert feigned illness to lure the messenger inside the cell. Then arising quickly he pushed the door against the messenger and fled.

Last September Lambert used the same method of escaping. Lambert was awaiting sentence on a forgery charge.

Supreme Court Adjourns Today Until May 18

Washington, May 4.—(UP)—The supreme court adjourned today until Monday, May 18, when it will sit only to read opinions. It will sit on the following two Mondays for the same purpose and will adjourn June 10 for the term. The fall term will start Oct. 5.

Mary Pickford with Reginald Denny in "Kiki"

Mary Pickford and Reginald Denny in a scene from her newest starring picture, "Kiki," a screamingly funny comedy taken from the famous New York stage success. Critics agree that this is Mary's best role. "Kiki" will be shown at the Paramount Monday and Tuesday.

Seeks New Fields

Commander Donald B. McMillan (above) veteran explorer, will turn to aircraft to aid him in his next expedition, a proposed round trip flight over the Atlantic Ocean and into unexplored Arctic regions. Charles F. Rocheville will act as pilot on the trip which will start June 21, from Boston, Mass.
